200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

Indictment studied in Dist. 59 probe

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

The Cook County State's Attorney's Office will decide next month whether a grand jury indictment will be sought in a case involving four Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 officials, Asst. State's Atty. Mitchell E. Garner said Monday.

Under investigation for alleged wrongdoing related to the formation of a unit school district are board of education members Judith Zanca and Emil Bahnmaier, Supt. Roger Bardwell and public relations director Leah Cummins, Garner said.

"We are in contact with several witnesses and will conclude our investigation in a month," he said.

Garner declined to reveal the names of the witnesses or the nature of their testimony, but said he will know next month whether there is "sufficient evidence of criminal activity" to warrant pursuit of a grand jury indictment.

THE STATE'S ATTORNEY'S investigation of the four Dist. 59 officials stems from charges made in May 1976 by board member Paul Kucharski.

In a 14-page statement issued last spring, Kucharski charged that the four misinformed the board and withheld information about the process of petitioning for the formation of a unit school district.

The four "made private deals, destroyed tapes and acted inappropriately as public officials," he said.

Reiterating her earlier denials of the charges, Mrs. Zanca Monday said Kucharski's allegations "are all falsehoods and lies and have no basis in truth."

SHE SAID she spoke to "a Mr. Turner" at the state's attorney's office Monday morning who told her he knew of no investigation involving her or any other Dist. 59 officials.

"He said if there was a case someone in the school district would know about it and no one does," Mrs. Zanca said. "He told me he'd probably have something in writing for me in a few days saying there is no investigation."

Garner said he knows of no Mr. Turner, but that as the assistant state's attorney handling the Dist. 59 investigation he knows there is an investigation.

"We have over 400 attorneys here and often the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing," he

Mikva gets earful

U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva got an earful when he came to Des Plaines Monday to publicize the plight of residents living under flight patterns at O'Hare Airport. With jets shrieking overhead, Mikva and two Federal Aviation Administration officials got plenty of data for their noise level tests. — Page 3.

The stock market fell to its lowest level in 19 months Monday, a setback sparked by rising interest rates. — Sect. 3, Page 1.

Sox win, Cubs lose

Both the White Sox and Cubs were involved in ninth-inning decisions Monday night. The Sox were more fortunate, however, as Lamar Johnson's home run in the last inning provided a 5-4 victory over Seattle. In Pittsburgh, the Pirates scored twice in the ninth to beat the Cubs, 7-6.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

5,000 found unreliable in nuclear weapons jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon transferred nearly 5,000 persons last year because officials felt they could not be trusted with nuclear weapons due to drug and alcohol abuse and other reasons, according to figures released Monday by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"What this means . . . is that those removed from their positions are as close to having their finger on the trigger as one can get," said Aspin.

"Any unstable individual having access to nuclear weapons amounts to our own version of Russian roulette. Unfortunately, the consequences of just one mishap could be catastrophic."

STATISTICS provided Aspin by the U.S. Defense Dept. showed that 4,965 persons were transferred under the Personnel Reliability Program, or about 4.3 per cent of all 121,767 Army, Navy and Air Force personnel having access to nuclear weapons.

The number and percentage is about the same as the previous year although there was a 48 per cent increase in the number of Navy personnel transferred, balanced by a reduction in Army removals.

The percentage among the services was fairly consistent in 1976, Aspin said, with the Army having a 5.5 per cent rate, the Air Force 4.1 per cent and the Navy 3.9 per cent.

According to the statistics, drug abuse was the leading reason for transfers, accounting for 30 per cent of the removals.

Jets shriek as Mikva takes residents' sounding

by SCOTT FOSDICK

U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, found out there's more to Des Plaines than meets the eye when he took a walk down Estes Avenue Monday.

To the eye, this shady residential street is a picture of peacefulness. But to the naked ear, as the congressman from Evanston painfully discovered, Estes Avenue is the rattled victim of devastating noise from aircraft roaring in and out of nearby O'Hare Airport.

Mikva and two Federal Aviation Administration officials spent an hour Monday morning taking noise readings from aircraft passing overhead and talking to residents about the problem. It was part of Mikva's effort to publicize the plight of residents and curb noise around O'Hare Airport.

The airport's early morning flight patterns cooperated with Mikva's sound survey, providing him with a steady stream of jets coming in for landings over the south side of Des Plaines neighborhood.

ONE OLD BOEING 707 broke the 110 decibel mark on the FAA's sound meter, and lent an air of credence to Mikva's arguments for more federal control of noise pollution. His arguments went largely unheard by the newspaper and television reporters gathered around him, however. It was just too noisy.

Residents of the neighborhood have learned a trick that helps them cope with the noise — they simply don't talk when a jet is flying overhead. Their speech, as a result, is disjointed and filled with noisy pauses.

Marge Mangelsdorf and her family moved to their house at 1615 Estes St. just a few weeks ago. She said she had no idea she was moving in under a heavily used flight path until the deal was closed.

Didn't the real estate agent say anything about it?

"No. We knew we were close to the airport, but we didn't know it would be this bad," she said.

SOME AIRLINE industry officials have argued that people who decide to live near an airport know what they're getting into and should learn to live with the noise. Mikva argued that most of the neighborhoods surrounding O'Hare were built long before the noisy Boeing 707s and DC-10s were invented.

"I want to dispell the myth that all these people moved in and the area was built after the problem already existed," Mikva said.

Carol Renkosik, 1604 Estes St., told the congressman she and her children spent a lot of time indoors when the jets are going over.

"In the summertime you can't go outside and hold a normal conversation," she said.

"If you think this is bad, you should be here when they're taking off. It's incredible," her husband, Robert, added.

ON THE WAY OUT of the neighborhood, Mikva stopped at the Iroquois outdoor swimming pool, 1836 E. Touhy Ave., to talk to lifeguard Dane Kamin.

Kamin said in addition to the noise problem, the jets depost a thin layer of fuel exhaust on the pool, creating a miniature oil-slick. He said this is a hassle to clean up, but acknowledged the noise is the biggest problem.

NOISE NEMESIS, A low flying plane blankets a Des Plaines neighborhood with noise while U-5 Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, and officials of the Federal Aviation Administration conduct a sound survey.

From Pennslyvania plant

Uranium ore diverted to Israel, experts say

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some intelligence analysts believe as much as 134 pounds of highly enriched uranium — enough for perhaps half a dozen bombs — may have been diverted to Israel from a Pennsylvania plant in the early 1960s, congressional experts said Monday.

House energy staff members said the intelligence assessment — identified only as coming from an agency involved in foreign operations, apparently the CIA — raises questions about government claims that no bomb-grade nuclear material has been stolen or diverted.

But Robert Fri, head of the Energy Research and Development Administration, said an investigation of unexpectedly high inventory discrepancies at the plant in Apollo, Pa., turned up "no evidence that a diversion had indeed occurred."

FRI TOLD THE energy subcommittee of the House Interstate Commerce Committee the "material unaccounted for" at Apollo is part of some five tons of bomb-grade plutonium and uranium believed trapped in processing equipment, discharged in radioactive waste or put on the list by imprecise accounting.

The five-ton nationwide figure is about one ton more than ERDA and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission detailed Friday. Officials said the extra ton represents the estimated amount of bomb-grade uranium trapped with perhaps four tons of lower-enriched uranium in a pair of gaseous diffusion processing plants.

"This report cannot prove absolutely that no diversion or theft has occurred," Fri said. But he said such accounting, coupled with physical safeguards, makes it virtually impossible for material to be lost or stolen.

Congressional staff members told UPI they received conflicting information on the Apollo plant from one intelligence agency. They said the agency's suspicions do not prove any material has been lost or stolen, but further investigation is needed.

THE APOLLO PLANT was operated during the 1960s by the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corp. It turned gaseous uranium into solid compounds, such as reactor fuel.

"We have been told by the agency that it has strong suspicions that a diversion occurred at Apollo," said one committee staff member. "We have not seen their evidence. We are trying to get it. If there was a diversion, it could have happened anywhere between 1960 and 1965."

Fri said a 1965 investigation by the Atomic Energy Commission indicated the Apollo plant had a 134-pound discrepancy in one year because it lumped operating losses for several years — mostly material coated inside pipes — on a single account.

In addition, he said, the process used at Apollo produced about twice the normal inventory discrepancy because uranium had to be processed through that plant two or three times when a single run would suffice at most other plants.

Canada rejects air strike talks bid

OTTAWA (UPI) — Transport Minister Otto Lang Monday night rejected an offer by Canada's striking air traffic controllers to negotiate a settlement and said he would proceed with legislation to end the nationwide air shutdown.

The Canadian Air Traffic Control Assn. said its 2,200 members would restore air service within six hours if the government agreed to let Canada's Anti-Inflation Board rule on demands for a 12.6 per cent wage increase.

Lang rejected the proposal as "nothing new" and said he still intends to present back-to-work legislation to parliament Tuesday.

"The latest proposal was unchanged in regard to salary," Lang said. "They are still asking the government to sign an agreement over the AIB guidelines."

Thousands of travelers were stranded in Canada, the United States and overseas when the controllers went on strike early Sunday, the result of a nine-month wage dispute with the federal government.

CANADA'S AIRLINES normally handle about 50,000 passengers daily on more than 500 flights. Flights were about one-tenth of that total Monday.

Air Canada and CP Air canceled more than 20,000 flight reservations, and Canadian airlines lost an estimated $5 million a day because of the strike.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said he will introduce an emergency bill in Parliament Tuesday. Most members of Parliament were expected back in the capital by Monday night.

"Our members are law-abiding citizens, and they would return to work if the government passes the legislation into law," said CATCA Vice President Bill Robertson, but added, "I think they feel it would be a shame and would be disappointed that they could not exercise their legal right to strike.

"WE HAVE ALREADY told the government in a message that it will take us at least six hours to get every station operational again."

Robertson said his association approached the government Sunday night with a "revised monetary offer subject to approval by the Anti-Inflation Board" but that the transport department rejected the offer saying "it was unacceptable because it was above AIB wage guidelines."

Air Canada, the country's national carrier, rerouted 23 international flights to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N.Y. Some passengers were bused up to nine hours from their takeoff or arrival points at airports in Bangor, Me., Burlington, Vt., Minneapolis and Seattle.

CATCA had scheduled a strike for midnight Monday, but moved its strike deadline to 4 a.m. Sunday when the government announced it intended to force the controllers back to work and possibly impose a contract settlement.

Lie detector test shows Ray killed King

A lie detector test indicates James Earl Ray killed Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and acted alone, Playboy Magazine interviewers said Monday in a story prepared for the magazine's September issue.

The polygraph test was the first Ray has taken since he was arrested June 8, 1968, Playboy said. It said the questioning was done at Brushy Mountain Penitentiary in Tennessee June 22.

The key sequence is:

"Q: Did you kill Martin Luther King Jr.?

"Ray: No.

"Q: Do you know for sure who killed Martin Luther King Jr.?

"Ray: No."

OFFICIALS OF JOHN E. Reid and Associates, the polygraph firm that handled the test, said Ray's involuntary responses indicated he lied, Playboy reported.

"It is the opinion of the examiner, based on the subject's polygraph records, that he is not telling the truth on the previously listed questions," they were quoted.

The next sequence is:

"Q: Did anyone ask you to kill Martin Luther King Jr.?

"Ray: No.

"Q: Did you arrange with anyone to kill Martin Luther King Jr.?

"Ray: No.

"Q: Did anyone give you any money to kill Martin Luther King Jr.?

"Ray: No."

THE EXPERTS SAID that on the basis of the polygraph reading, "He is telling the truth on the above listed questions."

Playboy's authors, summarizing the findings, said "the polygraph tests indicate that Ray did, in fact, kill Martin Luther King Jr. and that he did so alone."

Ray, informed of the results of the examination, was quoted as saying he does not believe lie-detector tests are accurate.

"Well, I don't know if there's anything accurate about these lie-detector tests," he said.

"Sen. Sam Ervin, I think, called it a medieval contraption or something. See, when I took the test, I had a headache all day. I took a bunch of aspirin. I don't know if that would affect the test or not. They also asked me a series of (control) questions about other robberies — a lot of those questions can cause certain anxiety if you're accused of them.

"I think it's best to answer questions when you're not hooked up and all that stuff — machines."

HALF OF THE interview was conducted after Ray was recaptured in June after he escaped briefly from Brushy Mountain.

Ray said he escaped in hopes of "making some sort of arrangements to turn myself in in exchange for a trial."

He said he was aware that type of negotiation sledom works and hoped to entice Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell "into some type of friend of the court arrangement with my lawyer."

He said he hoped to contact Bell and work out a deal through Nancy Becker, an ABC-TV reporter in Chicago who once interviewed him.

"You know, I don't think the state has that much of a case against me," Ray said. "I believe I'd have a good chance of being acquitted."

Columbo, DeLuca get 200-year jail terms will appeal for new trials because Pincham:

- Denied requests for a continuance in the trial, which began May 18, based on prejudicial pretrial publicity and the need by defense attorneys for more time to prepare their defense.
- Denied motions for separate trials.
- Refused to suppress incriminating statements Miss Columbo and DeLuca gave to police following their arrests May 15, and July 17, 1976.

MURPHY SAID HE also will appeal because Pincham allowed irrelevant prosecution testimony that Miss Columbo used profanity toward family members and police.

Toomin said he will appeal for DeLuca because Pincham refused to dismiss his client's indictment, which Toomin said was obtained on false and misleading testimony given before a Cook County Grand Jury; and because Pincham allowed inadmissible prosecution evidence and testimony in court.

First appeal check date for Miss Columbo will be Oct. 28 before Judge Richard J. Fitzgerald, presiding judge of the criminal division of the Cook County Circuit Court.

In a prepared statement, Mrs. Tygrett and other relatives of the Columbo family expressed gratitude to police, Cook County assistant state's attorneys and Pincham.

"The families believe that the killers have been brought to the bar of justice and received fitting punishment," the statement said. "It is hoped that no other family will be put through an ordeal such as these families have endured over the past year."

The statement concluded, "These families, as well as all decent people in our society, with the help of God, may take comfort in the sure knowledge that justice has been done."

McGovern pushes SALT parley

• Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., stopped off in Geneva, Switzerland, Monday on his way to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union for the talks with U.S. and Soviet delegates to the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks. McGovern, a Senate adviser to the U.S. SALT delegation, called for faster progress in the current round of negotiations which began in 1972. "The sad truth is that the galloping technology and insatiable military appetites for more overkill have been dramatically outpacing the capacity of our political institutions to reach sensible accommodations to reduce the burden of arms," he said.

• Heavy swells in the English Channel Monday forced Americans Stella Taylor and Jamie Stewart to abandon their attempts to become the first women to swim the 21-mile stretch between Dover and Calais, France, both ways nonstop. Neither reached the French coast because of rough water that also made six other swimmers give up one-way crossing attempts during the day. Ms. Stewart abandoned her effort after about eight hours in the water and Ms. Taylor gave up after about 10 hours. Ms. Taylor, a 39-year-old swimming coach from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and Ms. Stewart, 23, a Houston, Tex., swim coach, have both swum the Channel one way.

Storm dazzles but damages here

Monday morning's thunderstorms gave early risers a dazzling predawn lightning display, but the storms took their toll throughout the Midwest in lives, property damage and power outages.

Commonwealth Edison reported 10,000 customers lost electricity in the Northwest suburbs Monday morning.

The local outages were scattered, and mostly affected Des Plaines and Mount Prospect, where 6,000 customers lost power, some until noon.

FOUR MEMBERS OF a Grayslake family were killed in a storm Saturday, when their rented plane crashed near Parnell.

The DeWitt County coroner's office Monday identified the bodies of Albert Braun, 43; his wife Barbara, 42; grandson, Jason Braun, 4, an aunt, Mary Larimer, 72.

The bodies were removed Monday from the plane wreckage, which was buried in a muddy cornfield. Earth moving equipment was used to pull the wreckage from the field.

Western Chicago suburbs received as much as 3½ inches of rain in the Monday storm. Bethany Hospital in Chicago was forced to use emergency power during the morning.

COMMONWEALTH EDISON said no major power plants were knocked out in the Northwest suburbs, but many local transformers and power lines were hit in the electrical storm.

Commuters were hampered by flooded underpasses and rain that sent water coursing 10 inches deep across the inbound lanes of the Stevenson Expressway in suburban Summit.

Commuter trains on Chicago and North Western Ry. lines also ran behind schedule in the heavy downpour.

The National Weather Service said some of the thunderstorms towered 10 miles. They rumbled from the Missouri River Valley to the lower Great Lakes region, carrying torrential rains, high winds and, in some areas, hail.

LIGHTNING STRUCK a large citizens band radio antenna atop a wood frame home in tiny Buck Creek, Iowa, torching a fire that was shooting 12 feet into the air by the time firemen reached it. A father and mother, their two children and two other children died in the flames.

Police and firemen used boats at Cedar Rapids to rescue homeowners when floodwaters ran five to six feet deep through lowland areas, flowed into basements and threatened to flood upstairs rooms of some homes.

The storms dumped 7.23 inches of rain on Vinton, Iowa, and 6.76 inches on Jewell, Iowa. Bridges were washed out and underpasses flooded throughout the area.

Warmer, wetter month forecast

A warmer and wetter August than normal is forecast for northern Illinois, providing some relief for low water supplies throughout the state.

Soil moisture throughout the state is very low, and some towns and homes depending on shallow wells had problems during July, according to experts at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

In northern Illinois, water levels in wells were from two to eight feet below 10-year averages. Only in southwestern Illinois were well water levels higher than a year ago.

Water level in many lakes is down, including Lake Michigan which is only 2.6 feet above the all time July low recorded in 1964.

Experts at Northern Illinois University at DeKalb say a warm and wet August can be expected.

Although heat waves are most likely to occur in July, NIU climatologist Jack R. Villmow said in recent years there have been frequent heat waves at the end of August.

Unborn can sue doctors: high court

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Monday doctors and hospitals can be sued by the unborn. Previously, damages could be collected by someone only for injury done after conception. The controversial 4-3 ruling, a no-holds-barred opinion in which the usually staid justices attack each other by name, was hailed as a "landmark decision" by the winning lawyer. "There is no other state reviewing court in the nation that has ruled this way," said attorney Robert C. Strodel of Peoria. "The basic fundamental law has been extended one notch." Strodel represents Emma M. Renslow and her daughter, Leah Ann, born prematurely with brain damage March 25, 1974, because Mrs. Renslow, when she was 13-years-old and living in Bloomington, was twice given the wrong kind of blood at Mennonite Hospital. The mix-up occurred in 1965. Mrs. Renslow, now living near Denver, Colo., sued the hospital and Dr. Hans Stroink, its director of laboratories, for negligence and willful and wanton misconduct on behalf of herself and Leah Ann.

Skelton begins bid for treasurer

James M. Skelton, 37, a Champaign druggist and county treasurer, announced Monday he is a Republican candidate for state treasurer. In a six-city flying tour of the state, Skelton said if elected, he would handle state funds like an "investment banker. The placement of funds should be on a strict bid basis, and the current practice of placement of funds based upon a bank's record of community service should be abolished."

Milwaukee sewage woes studied

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Milwaukee city officials discussed funding Monday to revamp the city's sewage treatment system as ordered by a federal judge. U.S. District Court Judge John F. Grady ruled July 29 Milwaukee is violating federal and state common laws by dumping raw and insufficiently treated sewage into Lake Michigan. Robert Borchardt, chief engineer and general superintendent for Milwaukee's sewage commissions, estimated the cost of implementing the order at $1 billion. Grady's decision came in a suit filed in 1972 by Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott, who charged Milwaukee was polluting Illinois beaches and drinking water.

Infanticide suspect to get tests

A psychiatric examination was ordered Monday for Dwight Battles, charged with the murders of his two young daughters. Cook County Circuit Court Judge M. Bailey ordered the test for Battles, 25. He is charged with the murders of his daughters, Stephanie, 3, and Audry, 2, who were found dead in the family home July 10. Police said Battles had told them he locked the children in a room because he could not afford to feed them. When they cried, he told officers, he beat them.

Despite blond ringlets, man loses as Farrah look-alike

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Pete Wagner, who ran unsuccessfully for student president at the University of Minnesota on the promise he would leave town if elected, dropped back to report another loss — the "Farrah Fawcett-Majors Look Alike Contest."

"I can't believe it, I lost," he said.

Wagner, who works as a freelance cartoonist, wears his blond hair in ringlets.

"People are always coming up to me on the street and asking, 'Aren't you Lee Majors' wife?' " he said. So he entered the Farrah Fawcett-Majors look-alike contest in Milwaukee.

"We have exactly the same talents," he said. "Neither of us can sing, neither of us can dance, neither of us can act."

He said he believed he lost because the sponsors supplied free bathing suits for the finalists, "and I didn't know whether I should put down '32' or '42' for my size."

Wagner also lost the student president election at the University. He said he left town after a campaign on a "Tupperware Party" ticket that stirred deep passions. He ran on a platform that included "four years of mandatory ROTC for all students" and "public execution off all parking violators."

In addition to his cartooning work, Wagner said he is writing a book entitled, "I was a Casualty of the Sex Revolution," a definitive work on campus sex," he said.

Firefighters gamble to stop California blazes

California fought its worst outbreak of forest fires in a half century Monday as firefighters took a calculated gamble and shifted their firefighting troops to try to contain the growing inferno.

The gamble was to concentrate most of the 3,550 available men on the north end of the vast Marble Cone fire to protect the valuable watershed, leaving the south end undermanned and taking the risk the blaze's 78,000 acres would burst out and double in size.

The risk was taken because Marble Cone's flames, which already have consumed most of the Ventana Wilderness area in the scenic Big Sur country, were sweeping northward into the watershed of the Salinas-Carmel Valley, home of tens of thousands.

THE SITUATION was called "extremely critical" by fire boss Myron Lee because destruction of the ground cover would cause massive erosion, mudslides, silting and flooding next winter.

Lee said his decision was "not easy, but essential to protect the high priority watershed."

The Marble Cone fire was ignited last Tuesday by lightning. By Monday, firefighters had improvised 51 miles of fire break, less than half the blaze's perimeter.

Marble Cone was one of seven major fires in the drought-stricken state remaining out of control from among hundreds set last week.

With the annual fire season only half over and with the driest part still to come, a total of 250,000 acres of timber and brush have burned. Foresters guessed the record 300,000 acres of destroyed timber in 1924, the next worst, would not only be surpassed, but surpassed within a few days.

CALIFORNIA'S largest fire was the 81,000-acre Scarface in the Modoc-Lassen area of the state's far northeast. Scarface was so enormous it generated its own weather, causing rain in Oregon and Idaho. According to satellite pictures, its smoke poured out over parts of five states.

But by Monday Scarface, which has burned 221 million board feet of lumber, was 80 per cent contained, and firefighters hoped for full control by Tuesday evening.

With diminishing winds, firefighters predicted several major fires would be contained by Tuesday. These were the Gerig, the Eagle Lake, Bomta, Pondosa and Horr's Corner.

Federal officials said an emergency situation in western states cuased by drought and lightning would continue at least another five days. Fires were burning in six western states.

The nation's largest fire, near Nome, Alaska, ruined 335,000 acres of land used by reindeer for grazing. A total of 1.5 million acres of tundra have burned in the last two weeks.

BOBBY LIBIT, 626 Raupp Blvd., Buffalo Grove, today is an active 9-year-old who likes to play baseball and soccer with his dog. Two years ago, Bobby was given only three months to live.

'Incurable' illness didn't dim 9-year-old's spirit

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die, and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs. Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music.

"I DANCE, I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 13-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection.

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle.

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Resident won't pay taxes, his bill tripled last year

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said.

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said. He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year. Keeley's property has a higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said.

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said.

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

THE COMMITTEE also is calling for a freeze on Cook County assessments, a three-month extension on the Aug. 15 tax payment deadline and several other changes in tax assessment procedures.

"If more people get involved, we may be able to do something. I'm going to go right along with this group and not pay my taxes," Keeley said.

"You can't keep on taxing people — the sky can't be the limit," he said. "I'm about to retire, but I may have to work the rest of my life at these rates."

Homeowners form protest group

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans.

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p.m. at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jane Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere."

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D.C., is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes.

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings.

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills came out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else. I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills.

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said.

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council.

She said a arge-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases.

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said.

But for taxpayers such as Mrs. Spring, who are still concerned with their current tax bill, the idea of joining with other irate taxpayers is appealing.

"I'm so excited about it (Thursday's meeting) because everyone has been so frustrated since the bills came," she said.

Group to monitor local spending

A group of Arlington Heights citizens, upset about higher tax bills, has organized to monitor spending by local government agencies.

"I feel that taxpayers around here have had just about enough," said Pat Carbery, 1026 S. Chestnut Ave., who started the group. "This is a type of tax rebellion by irate citizens."

Leaders of the various homeowners' associations in Arlington Heights are being contacted by Mrs. Carbery in hopes of forming the watchdog group.

MRS. CARBERY expects a large group of citizens to attend the Arlington Heights Village Board meeting Monday to ask village trustees for a list of their spending priorities. Eventually they will do the same at school, park district and township board meetings, she said.

"The people here have been the last of the big spenders passing all sorts of referendums," she said. "But now that they've seen what's happened to their tax bills they want to find out how their money is being spent."

Mrs. Carbery said the group plans to question village trustees about plans to use almost $3 million in federal revenue-sharing funds to build a new police and fire building when vacant schools are available.

"We feel they should look at the possibility of moving the village's administrative offices to another building, possibly a vacant school, and letting the police department have all of the existing municipal building," she said.

"Money must be well spent and in our opinion water should be the first priority. We just want to know if the board agrees," she said.

ANOTHER RESIDENT who plans to join the group, Pauline Buss, 1507 E. Miner St., agreed that citizens should start examining government spending more closely.

"I do believe the time is right for taxpayers to ask what officials are doing with their money," she said. "Citizens are becoming aware that it's not enough just to elect our officials. We have to keep an eye on them after they take office."

Whether the loosely organized, informal citizens' group will become more structured has not been decided, Mrs. Carbery said, but residents involved plan to attend all meetings of government agencies.

"We're still in the formation stage," Mrs. Carbery said, "and haven't worked out all the details. But we feel it's time people find out how much money is being spent where before they get their tax bills."

Construction set at Nike Base

Construction of a $4 million Army Reserve center will begin next spring at the former Arlington Heights Nike Base, Wilke and Central roads.

All of the dilapidated green buildings now on the site, except the concrete block house near the eastern border of the base, will be removed late this winter, Army Reserve officials said Monday.

The 80,694-square-foot building will have two levels and a brick exterior, Maj. James Morrison said.

"WE THINK it will be a building people will be proud of. We want a facility the community will accept — not an eyesore," Morrison said.

A 4,000-square-foot vehicle maintenance building also is planned, Morrison said, as well as a complete refurbishing of the block house building, which will be used mainly for storage, printing and graphic arts production.

"The block house should blend in with the new building and the community," he said.

The new center will serve as administrative headquarters for the 85th U.S. Army Reserve Command, the 12th Special Forces Group and related units. The 86th U.S. Army Reserve Command will be moved in October to Forest Park, Morrison said.

THE NEW CENTER, which will face Central Road, will have an occupancy maximum of 1,400 persons.

"But I doubt that at any one time it will have the maximum occupancy," Morrison said.

The center probably will continue to have about 50 full-time workers, he said. Most army reserve units using the Arlington Heights base are there on Thursday evenings and Saturdays.

Other plans for improving the Nike site are new parking aflccsiicitea,es site are new parking facilities, access roads and sidewalks, Morrison said.

The improvements will mark the final transition of the Arlington Heights base from a strategic Nike-Hercules missile site in the 1950s to an Army Reserve center.

On-site missiles were removed from the base in the early 1970s, when new technology made the Nike anti-aircraft weapons obsolete. The last of five radar towers was dismantled in 1975 after the site was turned over to the Army Reserve.

Zero vandalism backers get discount

Discount tickets to two amusement parks are available to students with zero vandalism pledge cards and their families.

The program is part of the Arlington Heights zero vandalism committee's fight to stop crime by youths. By signing the pledge cards, available at any park district fieldhouse, youngsters promise not to commit acts of vandalism.

Card holders and their families will receive $1 off the admission price at Old Chicago amusement park in Bolingbrook and Adventureland amusement park in Addison.

Card holders also are eligible to attend a splash party and dance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Olympic Pool, 500 N. Ridge Ave. Registration deadline for the free event is Thursday.

Calderwood listed as serious today

L. W. Calderwood, former Arlington Heights police chief, was listed in serious condition Monday night in the coronary-care unit of Northwest Community Hospital.

The 73-year-old Arlington Heights resident was admitted for treatment last week after fainting.

Calderwood retired last year after 18 years as police chief. He had been listed in fair condition Sunday.

Indictment mulled in Dist. 59 case said. "Mr. Turner can only speak from his own personal knowledge and he obviously isn't aware of what I'm doing."

Bahnmaier also said he knows of no investigation and denied the charges made against him by Kucharski.

BAHNAMIER AND Mrs. Zanca have repeatedly demanded a public apology from Kucharski for his charges, contending that he has no proof and there is no investigation under way.

Bardwell and Mrs. Cummins were unavailable for comment Monday.

"The fact that the state's attorney is looking into the situation is grafifying irrespective of what the outcome turns out to be," Kucharski said Monday. "It suggests I was not all wrong in bringing it to the public eye and asking that someone look into it and tell me if I'm right or wrong."

Kucharski said that from the beginning he has had serious concerns as to how the unit district movement was handled and the ethical roles played by certain individuals in getting the issue to a referendum in April.

BAHNMAIER, MRS. Zanca and Mrs. Cummins were members of the Committee of 10 Dist. 59 residents who filed the petition seeking formation of an Elk Grove Township unit school district.

Kucharski charged that the three district officials and Bardwell made a deal with representatives of Centex Industrial Park that involved promising a lower tax rate for the new district in exchamge for the business community's support of the unit district referendum.

Defeated by better than a 2-to-1 margin in a referendum last April, the unit district would have combined 21 Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one administration.

POLICE BOMB squad members carry a defused bomb from the American Metals Climax building at Rockefeller Center Monday. The bomb consisted of two or three sticks of dynamite and a timing device hidden in a suitcase. The building was one of many that received threats after last week's bombings by the FALN.

Inmates release hostages unhurt

More than a hundred inmates armed with kitchen utensils and workshop tools seized 14 hostages at a state prison Monday, but freed the last of the captives 12 hours later. The prisoners at New York's Eastern Correction facility near Napanock, N.Y., released the final seven hostages just before 8 p.m. CDT. None of the hostages was injured. A spokesman for the Dept. of Correctional Services said the prisoners were "apparently satisfied with negotiations" over four demands, including amnesty from prosecution for the takeover. But it was uncertain when the prisoners would return to their cells and end the first hostage-taking insurrection at an upstate New York prison since the bloody Attica riot of 1971.

Alyeska denies waste of money

Alyeska Pipeline Co. today rejected charges the firm wasted $1.5 billion in construction of the Alaska oil pipeline. A report prepared for the Alaska Pipeline Commission said cost overruns were caused by a pattern of mismanagement. The report will be used in arguments before the Interstate Commerce Commission, which will set rates for transporting oil from Alaska's North Slope fields to the lower 48 states. The transportation rates will take construction costs into account and if Alaskan officials can prove the operation was managed poorly, their oil royalties will be increased.

Fighting reported in south Lebanon

Bitter fighting in south Lebanon Monday jeopardized the Middle East peace efforts of Sec. of State Cyrus Vance. Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese leftists exchanged artillery and machine-gun fire with Christian rightist militiamen overnight in the tense southern border region near Israel. At least two persons were reportel killed and four wounded in areas held by guerrillas and leftists. No casualty figures were available from the rightist enclaves, which are closed to outside access except from Israel. Syrian, Lebanese and Palestinian negotiators had engineered a temporary lull in the fighting with an agreement two weeks ago on steps to implement a cease-fire in the region.

Israel admits to arms supply

Israel admitted Monday for the first time that its artillery has supported Lebanese Christian rightists in their battles with Moslem leftists and Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon. "We help them militarily," Prime Minister Menahen Begin said. "It's no secret and it should not be a secret. Public opinion should know about this. "Without our military help the Christian minority would have long ago been wiped out totally." Israeli support of the Christians began before the end of the Lebanese civil war and has been aimed at depriving Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas of a staging ground for attacks against Israeli settlements.

Simulated combat to test role of women soldiers

BONN, West Germany (UPI)—The U.S. Army is sending a special team on maneuvers next month to test how well women soldiers handle the stress, strain and discomfort of simulated combat, a spokesman said Monday.

Women soldiers — more than 10,000 now serve Europe alone — are forbidden by law to be assigned to combat roles.

But they can be and are assigned to combat support and combat service roles, including work with medical detachments, supply and transportation units, maintenance groups, signal units and military police.

THE DEPT. OF the Army will send a 25-man research team to the Reforger maneuver in September to assess the performance of women soldiers working in the field with such support and service units during simulated combat, the spokesman said.

The maneuver is to last about 10 days, although units usually move to the field several days before the maneuver officially starts.

Women soldiers took part in last year's summer maneuvers in Germany, but no one except their immediate commanders assessed their performances.

This year's study should indicate whether women soldiers are being used as efficiently as they might, the spokesman said.

The spokesman stressed the study is not to determine whether women soldiers can be assigned to combat roles. The law forbids such assignment, and that also prevents the army experimenting with the idea.

The Brookings Institution of Washington, D.C., in a recent study entitled "Women in the Military," noted a potential combat role for women is a relatively unexplored and highly emotional issue.

The issue is controversial within the Army because it raises the possibility that an American woman could be a killer, or be killed in combat.

Polanski pleads guilty; mental exam ordered

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Film director Roman Polanski pleaded guilty Monday to "unlawful sexual intercourse" with a 13-year-old girl and was ordered to undergo psychiatric examination to determine whether he should be committed to a hospital as a "mentally disordered sex offender."

Superior Court Judge Laurence J. Rittenband withheld sentencing pending a probation report on the 43-year-old former husband of murdered actress Sharon Tate and maker of such movies as "Rosemary's Baby" and "Chinatown."

The charge carries a possible penalty of from 1 to 50 years in prison, but Polanski could be placed on probation. A native of Poland, he also faces possible federal action to deport him as an undesirable alien for moral turpitude.

THE DISTRICT attorney's office agreed, in return for the guilty plea, to drop five other more serious counts in the indictment involving the alleged drugging and raping of the unidentified girl March 10 at the home of actor Jack Nicholson, who was away at the time.

Rittenband appointed two psychiatrists to examine Polanski and set a hearing for Sept. 19 to determine whether he be declared a "mentally disordered sex offender." He did not set a date for sentencing.

District Atty. John Van de Kamp said the "plea bargaining" arrangement was reached largely at the urging of the girl's family that she be spared the ordeal of appearing on the witness stand at a sensational trial.

Attorney Lawrence Silver, representing the family, read in open court a letter to Rittenband asking that he accept Polanski's plea.

The reliving of the sorry events with their delicate content, through the vehicle of direct and cross examination in this courtroom packed with strangers would be a challenge to the emotional well-being of any person," Silver read.

"The potential for harm is even greater to one of tender years."

POLANSKI, A TINY man of five feet, two inches, dapper in a gray pinstriped suit and with his brown curly hair at the nape of his neck, appeared cool and unruffled as he answered questions by deputy district attorney Roger Gunson as to whether he understood the possible consequences of his plea.

Polanski, who previously had insisted he was innocent and would be vindicated, was directed to state what crime he was admitting.

"I had intercourse with a female person not my wife who was under the age of 18," Polanski said calmly.

Gunson pressed him as to whether he knew at the time the girl was 13. He replied: "I did."

Polanski's trial would have started Tuesday, the eighth anniversary of the date Miss Tate and four other persons were murdered by Charles Manson "family" members at their Beverly Hills home. Polanski was in London at the time.

It was the second recent major case of plea bargaining by the Los Angeles district attorney's office. Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst pleaded guilty in May to a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and was given a five-year suspended sentence.

VICE PRESIDENT Walter Mondale, right, receives a standing ovation from American Bar Assn. president Justin Stanley and other members of the bar at the ABA convention Monday.

ATTY. GEN. GRIFFIN BELL answers reporters' questions at an ABA press conference that focused on the Korean bribery scandal.

Politicans share ABA spotlight

by KURT BAER

Capitol Hill newsmakers and Illinois' top political leaders shared the spotlight Monday at the formal opening of the American Bar Assn. in Chicago.

• Vice President Walter Mondale said American intelligence gathering organizations abused their power so badly in recent years that Watergate pales by comparison.

• Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell said there will be indictments for income tax evasion coming out of the Korean bribery investigation with or without the testimony of wealthy Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

• Illinois Sen. Adlai Stevenson said he has decided to obtain additional counsel for the Senate Ethics Committee investigating South Korean bribes amid growing speculation that present or former senators may be implicated in the scandal.

• Gov. James R. Thompson said more and more social problems are becoming legal problems and he urged the nation's lawyers "to make the words of the law a reality" for the nation's poor.

• Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic said the city was happy to have an estimated 15,000 lawyers in Chicago for the convention, and told the attorneys his office would be open 24 hours a day "in case any of you get into mischief you can't handle."

Mondale said while serving on the Senate Select Intelligence Committee he found Watergate was "only the tip of the iceberg" in a sea of secret surveillance.

He cited a long list of abuses by the CIA, FBI, Army, National Security Agency and the Internal Revenue Service.

"Our investigation found that the roots of many of these abuses could be traced back to a frame of mind born in the early days of the Cold War — to the belief that America could not be defended without more deceit and illegality than democracy permits, or more cynicism and hypocrisy than our beliefs would allow."

Mondale said President Carter's administration "has rejected absolutely the doctrine that any government official, including the President, is above the law. President Carter has made it clear that he, and everyone who serves under him, has a duty to obey the law just like every other citizen."

MONDALE SAID he hoped Congress would pass legislation submitted by the administration that would prohibit any wiretapping without a court order and also allow the courts to examine requests for wiretap warrants based on national security claims.

Bell told a news conference that he has urged the South Korean government to persuade Park to "tell everything he knows" about the apparent bribery of congressman and that Carter has had "some involvement" in efforts to get Park to talk.

Park fled Washington last year after federal investigators began questioning him about his suspected role in covert Korean efforts to buy influence in Congress.

U2's Powers buried at Arlington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Francis Gary Powers, the pilot involved in a Cold War incident when his U2 spy plane was shot down by the Russians in 1960, was buried Monday in Arlington National Cemetery.

Powers, 47, a pilot and traffic reporter for KNBC-TV, Los Angeles, was killed along with a cameraman on Aug. 1, when their helicopter crashed.

It was what the Air Force called its "simple honors" ceremony for former officers. The honor guard in black dress uniforms snapped to attention as the flag-draped coffin was taken from a hearse and escorted to the grave.

THREE VOLLEYS of shots were fired and a bugler played "Taps."

Powers' widow, Claudia, was dressed all in white and showed little emotion. His mother, Mrs. Ida Powers, began to cry. His son and daughter, Gary Jr. and Dee, sat quietly as Maj. David Sams read from scripture and recited an Air Force prayer entitled "High Flight."

Sams presented the widow with the flag, and as the family left, a single red rose was placed atop the casket.

Powers was 1,200 miles inside the Soviet Union on May 1, 1960, when a Russian surface-to-air missile exploded near his U2. He bailed out and was captured.

Premier Nikita Khrushchev announced this in cancelling a summit meeting with President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

THE UNITED STATES claimed at first that Powers was a civilian pilot on a routine weather mission that went off course when the plane's oxygen system went awry.

Khrushchev produced photographs and Eisenhower dropped the denials.

Powers was convicted after admitting he was paid $2,500 a month by the Central Intelligence Agency, and for two years was imprisoned 120 miles from Moscow.

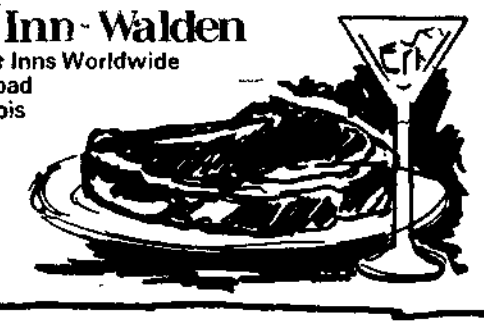

Then, on Feb. 10, 1962, at a bridge in Berlin, Powers was exchanged for Soviet Col. Rudolf Abel, sentenced by the United States to 30 years in prison for spying.

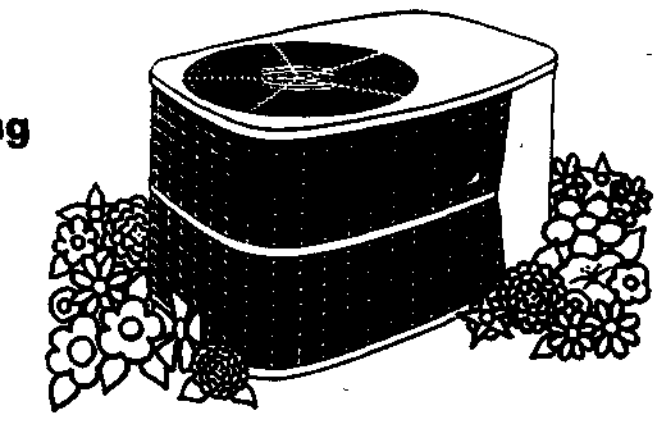

MAJ. DAVID SAMS, an Air Force chaplain, hands the flag to Sue Powers, widow of Francis Gary Powers, the U2 pilot who was shot down over Russia in 1960, after he was buried in Arlington National Cemetery Monday. Powers died in a helicopter crash last Monday in Los Angeles.

Nightmare ends; Columbo justice decreed by judge

The nightmare began late one Tuesday night, May 4, 1976. It ended Monday, when Patricia Columbo, 21, and her lover Frank DeLuca, 39, were sentenced to 200 to 300 years for the murders of Miss Columbo's family in Elk Grove Village.

DeLuca, a soft-spoken manager of a Walgreen Drug Store, fired the .32-caliber revolver that snuffed out the lives of Frank, Mary and 13-year-old Michael Columbo, testimony showed.

Miss Columbo looked on while her parents and younger brother died, prosecutors said. She then wielded a pair of scissors to mutilate the bodies of her mother and brother, according to the state.

DeLuca and Miss Columbo murdered her family after they could not find anyone willing to go through with the crime, according to testimony.

Why? Because her parents disapproved of her love affair with DeLuca, a married father of five. Because her father virtually wrote her out of his will, leaving her only $5,000. Because of hate.

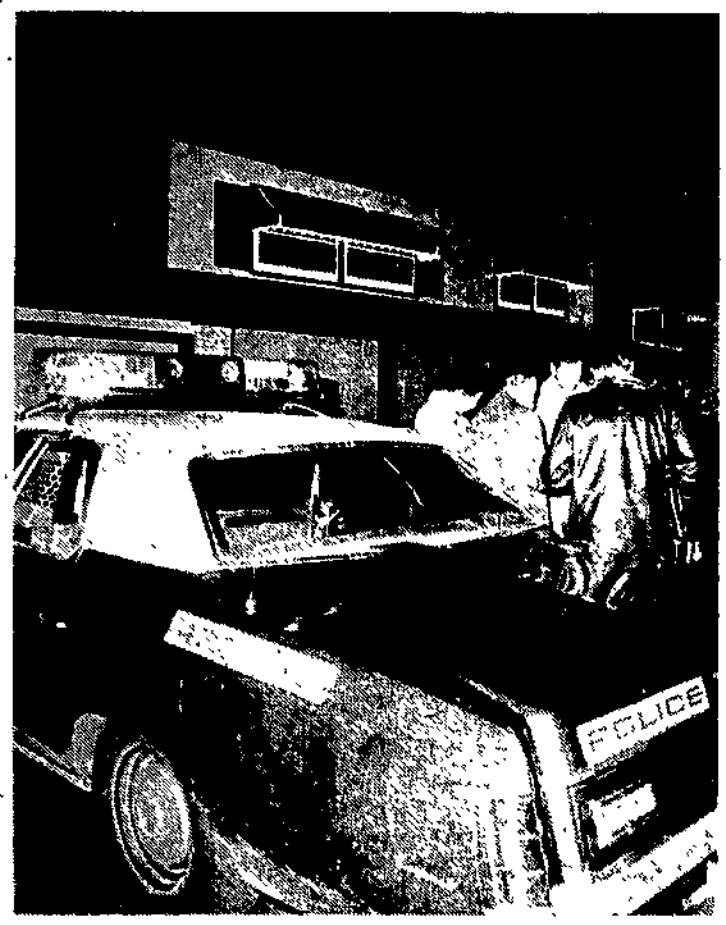

A jury found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty July 1. The defendants will appeal for new trials. But even if they win their appeals, they still will spend years behind bars.

Patricia Columbo — the beautiful daughter of a model family.

Frank DeLuca: a loving father of five who loved Patricia most.

The nightmare begins: 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Prosecutor Al Baliunas, a satisfied man.

SOMEDAY THIS TRANQUIL scene may be replaced by modern classrooms and throngs of cars on a second Harper College campus. But nearly two years after purchasing this 117-acre site, Harper officials are still discussing whether to build or not to build. Smaller enrollment increases, energy problems and trends away from physical campuses have some people worried.

Harper's Lahti keeps eye riveted on second campus

by RENA WISH COHEN
Second of three parts

The sign has been there so long that corn is twisting around it.

For nearly two years, in fact, the billboard on 117 acres of farmland at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in Wheeling Township has heralded the coming of the second campus of Harper College.

For months there have been rumblings of discontnt over Harper College's plans to build a second campus in Wheeling Township. Although the board of trustees argues Harper's growth will slow in the future, education reporter Rena Wish Cohen talks with Harper Pres. Robert E. Lahti about why he relentlessly defends the need for a second campus.

Today the property is as empty as the day Harper purchased it in late 1975 — no signs of life except the corn gone to seed, no buildings except some deserted barns left from the previous owner and certainly no students.

It is empty partly because projects such as a second campus require a lot of planning and have to run the gamut of approvals from numerous state boards before one shovelful of dirt can be turned.

BUT IT ALSO IS empty because in the fall of 1976, one year after voters approved the purchase of the land, Harper's perennially skyrocketing enrollment suddenly stood still. And the Harper Board of Trustees began to wonder whether a second campus was such a good idea.

The Harper administration began talking about another campus as early as 1971, just a year after the main campus at Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine opened.

Over the next few years, as Harper searched for an appropriate site and dickered with surrounding communities and state agencies, the annual surge in enrollment and resulting overcrowding at the Palatine campus reinforced the administration's cry for additional facilities.

And "additional facilities," in the Harper parlance, always meant a second campus.

As one long-term member of the Harper Board of Trustees observed, "You asked the administration about alternatives and they never gave you any."

So, when enrollment shot up more than 20 per cent just before voters went to the polls to authorize the purchase of the Wheeling Township site, it didn't seem to matter that some board members swore not to begin construction on the site until enrollments justified it.

A SECOND CAMPUS, it seemed, was in the cards.

There are those who believe it still is in the cards. Chief among them is Harper College Pres. Robert E. Lahti.

Talk to him about the fizzle in enrollment last fall, and he'll tell you it was a nationwide phenomenon probably caused by the expiration of educational benefits under the G.I. Bill or the recovery of the economy.

At any rate, he'll point out, summer school enrollments at Harper this year are way ahead of projections.

Remark that people in the community are concerned that declining enrollments in area elementary schools will hit Harper in a few years and he'll remind you 19-year-olds just out of high school compose only 25 per cent of Harper's student body. The average age at Harper is over 28.

Point out that Harper's biggest growth is in evening and adult noncredit classes, but that the state's 75 per cent building reimbursement applies only to "full-time equivalent" students who attend for credit during the day, and Lahti will tell you that Gov. James R. Thompson has just written a letter to the Illinois Board of Higher Education asking for a change in the funding formula.

"WHAT WE'RE saying to the state is, if you want us to do the job and continue to do the job, we cannot be funded on the old formula," Lahti says.

And he believes they'll respond.

"You can see it in the bill in the Congress now that would eliminate a mandatory retirement age. The baby boom people will be the lawmakers — it's the graying of America — and I think they'll fund differently."

In other words, Lahti says, don't be handcuffed to old ideas or time will pass you by. Eventually, he says, funding will cach up with the trend toward older students interested in learning for learning's sake and oblivious to course credits.

In the meantime, Lahti says, start small on the second campus. Build enough facilities to offer some liberal arts courses and six or eight career programs which are in demand. Have a small library and limit food service to vending machines or a short-order grill. See how it goes, and then react.

Clearly, Lahti thinks it will go over big. He sees more students lurking in every corner, ready to pound on Harper's door. The enrollments, he says, will come from many sources:

- From room that opens up when the crunch at the Palatine campus is relieved.

Right now, lack of space is preventing Harper from answering a demand for courses in auto body repair. When there's space, there will be students.

- From "transplants" from the 25 off-campus facilities Harper uses for classes.

Satellites such as the Willow Park Center in Wheeling hosted more than 3,000 students last fall and Lahti argues there would have been more if Harper could have remodeled the space it was leasing for specialized needs. But "no one will rent to you and let you tear up a building."

- From people who live nine or 10 miles from the Palatine campus and balk at the 20- or 30-minute drive.

Today, Lahti notes, Wheeling Township has the largest population in Harper's four-township district, but the lowest proportion of people attending Harper as credit students. When Wheeling and Prospect Heights residents find the second campus in their back yards, he says, they will be more likely to take advantage of the opportunity to attend Harper.

- From the increasing number of persons clamoring for "retraining" in their chosen fields.

Harper already is offering refresher courses for persons in the banking, nursing and real estate to help them meet new certification requirements. Federal statistics indicating the average adult will need new skills every 10 years to keep up with technology signal a bigger role for Harper in this area, Lahti says.

- From the sheer increase in potential students that will accompany the population boom in the Northwest suburbs.

Demographers estimate the population of Harper's college district will mushroom from 415,000 today to more than 610,000 before the year 2000. That means a 50 per cent increase in the pool of prospective Harper students.

So Lahti is not worried about the success of a second campus. What does worry him is getting the preparations under way. Because even if Harper plunges into the planning stages today, it probably will be 1982 before the first student walks through the door of a building at the Palatine and Schoenbeck road site.

And it will be longer than that if Lahti's views don't prevail.

Skeptics still are wary about wavering enrollments, fearful that the novelty of having a college in the Northwest suburbs has worn off and that Harper may not be able to fill the extra classrooms on a second campus.

They wonder whether there is a point where Harper should draw the line and say, for example, "Sorry, but we don't have room for belly dancing classes."

Besides, they say, it may not be necessary to build a handsome new campus to solve overcrowding at the Palatine facilities.

Tomorrow: The alternatives.

'Rooms of good cheer' improve Soviet spirit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet psychiatrists have developed what they hope is the ideal tonic for the drudgery of work on the furniture assembly line — "rooms of good cheer," shorter and more entertaining than coffee breaks.

The program is being tested in one of the biggest furniture factories in the Soviet Baltic Republics, the Vilnius Association Shops in Lithuania.

"Such rooms of good cheer which raise the production tone are represented by film showrooms where workers during two special breaks a shift watch short films," the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

THE BREAKS last six to eight minutes, Tass said. Workers can select their favorite programs.

"Without leaving the factory the furniture makers may admire a view of the Baltic, travel to the picturesque lakes of the Republic or on the Kursh Spit" (a scenic coastal area), Tass said.

Psychiatrists came up with the "good cheer" idea after automation at the factory. Automation took some of the sweat out of being a factory worker, but it created other problems.

"Automatic devices, while relieving the physical strain of the workers, have in some measure because of the unavoidable monotony involved, somewhat increased mental strain," Tass said.

First the Soviets tried exercise periods, where workers performed their situps, pushups and jumping jacks right on the factory floors. The rooms of good cheer came next.

"Observations have shown that such rooms remove fatigue and improve the general sense of well-being, at the same time raising productivity by 10 to 15 per cent," Tass said.

"Our aim: To fear God, tell the truth and make money"
H C PADDOCK, 1852 - 1935

Walker should pay his debts

Former Gov. Daniel Walker is engaging in a cynical bit of manipulation in trying to write off a substantial part of his campaign debt as campaign contributions.

Walker's action has put more than 30 Illinois hotels and restaurants in a bind because as holders of liquor licenses they are prohibited from making campaign contributions.

In addition, writing off the $200,000 in debts as contributions takes advantage of Walker's standing as a public official to do something that no private citizen could get away with. Walker is essentially skipping out on his financial obligations.

Officials of at least seven of the establishments whose bills were listed as contributions on Walker's campaign financial report expressed surprise at the way the bills were handled.

Officials of the liquor control commission also have said they will investigate the situation to see whether the liquor license holders whose bills to Walker have suddenly become contributions ought to be punished for breaking the law.

If any of the establishments finds itself unwittingly in hot water just because it extended credit to the campaign of a governor, justice will not be served.

The practice of some political candidates, particularly unsuccessful ones, skipping out on campaign debts is a long-standing and disreputable part of the American political process. It is for that reason that many businesses who work with candidates, including newspapers that accept political advertising, demand cash in advance for services.

Anyone who aspires as Walker does to a position as a "new breed" politician ought to feel obligated to pay his campaign debts. Period.

Writing legitimate debts off as campaign contributions is not the honorable course. Walker should treat his debts for what they are and not deal in bookkeeping sleight of hand that can inconvenience or embarrass his creditors.

Kiddie nudes go too far

The more you read about plans for children to pose nude in a so-called beauty contest, the more you have to wonder what kind of person would put on such an event.

His name is Dick Drost, and he is the sponsor of the annual Miss Nude America and Miss Nude World contest at Naked City, Indiana. Through the years, we've always considered his contests harmless, if silly, endeavors.

Hundreds of people show up and pay the $10 admission fee at Drost's shows. The spectators, fully clothed, not only watch the spectacle of the crowning of Miss Nude but also snap photographs.

By including kids in his show, Drost has crossed the line between harmless nonsense and cynical exploitation.

Apparently, the owner of the nude resort has been doing this for several years, but only since the nationally publicized child pornography scandal has it drawn any attention.

It's time it got the negative publicity it deserves.

The child contest works like this:

Parents enter their children between the ages of 6 and 16 and in return are refunded their $10 admission fee. Then the kids parade nude in a contest like the adults.

Injecting kids into this event is too much for us to tolerate regardless how their parents feel about it. Unknowing children deserve better protection, if not from their parents, then from Indiana officials.

Newton County, Indiana authorities ought to take a fresh look at this annual affair because it has gotten out of hand.

"... and while I'm at it — here's to fewer government regulations."

The pay off.

The case for independence of press from government

Paul Greenberg

Now and then, regularly really, a reporter who looks like a decent fellow or a nice lady may be taken aside by a politician and asked in the most reasonable way to keep something out of the paper, or to handle some small matter with particular solicitude.

The politician doing the asking is usually just starting out in public office or at the end of a long career, but he could be anywhere in between. And he usually makes it clear that it's not in his interest that he's asking — goodness, no — but in the interest of the city, or the county, or the state. Sometimes the nation's, which is when this sort of appeal seems to work best.

Often enough it's a perfectly sincere appeal, based on the belief that letting some piece of the public business out will really harm the public interest. It might erode people's confidence, or make government more exepensive, or just raise a lot of unnecessary sand. So: Why not work together?

Because the people would be deprived of an important check on their officials, and of information needed to make important decisions. Like whom to vote for at the next election.

GRANTING FOR A moment, and only for a moment, that many short-term efficiencies might be achieved by this kind of happy cooperation between politicians and press, eventually this symbiotic relationship between the two could come to resemble a conspiracy. In the public good, of course. Or rather in what the politicians and newspapers agreed was the public good, which is not necessarily the same.

Eventually, the press could take on some of the responsibilities of politicians by deciding the best way to present events to the public for political effect, and the politicians might get into news management. Roles would be blurred that, certainly over the long term and perhaps over the short, too, should be kept separate.

The rationale for keeping the press and politics separate is not necessarily efficiency. Decisions (including bad ones) might be made more smoothly if politicians and press worked together. A better argument for separate roles is the need for public information and public judgment. Upon those rest democratic government. Without them, democracy becomes the manipulation of the blind by the arrogant.

Even when the arrogant are nice guys who want to keep things from the people for their own good, that is no longer democracy. Maybe that's why Jefferson said that, if he had to make a choice between having a government or having newspapers, he would choose newspapers. Governments can be replaced; whether they are replaced for good or ill may depend on how well people are informed.

IN A WAY, IT is a remarkably naive and inefficient and tumultuous system, Jefferson's. Opening everything up just invites a lot of trouble. (Although it may prevent much worse.) When some newsman just out of Journalism School tries to explain all this — if he believes it himself — he may get only a look in reply that says: You're putting me on, you don't believe all that, it's just another cover for baiting the poor harassed public official. And there may be no convincing otherwise.

And yet this curious 18th century experiment, despite some rough times and brief retreats, has stumbled on now for better than 200 years, while the knowing kings and queens of Europe have been confined to history texts and ceremonial appearances. Which system really has proven the more efficient and lasting?

But in the rush of a meeting or in a friendly chat at City Hall, it may seem a bit pretentious to go into all this. It would be a lot simpler, and much less work, to be a nice guy and not tell everything you know. It's a pity that the need for an independent and even obstreperous press should take so long to explain, because it's the sort of thing politicians and press should talk about, and think about.

Issues split Carter from his support

by ARNOLD SAWISLAK
(Commentary)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As was almost sure to happen, Jimmy Carter's chickens have come home to roost and the henhouse is starting to get crowded.

The blacks are angry because Carter has not thrown massive federal resources into making jobs. Labor is ticked about Carter's minimum wage position. Feminists are seething about Carter's opposition to federally-fiannced abortions. Defense hardliners object to deep-sixing the B-1; the other side is upset about continuing work on neutron weapons.

It was completely predictable. Carter won the presidency by fitting together a coalition of differing interests and there was bound to be conflict when they all started presenting their claims at the White House.

CARTER SAYS, according to various reports, that he is being dunned for some things he never agreed to buy. He says people are mistaking what they hoped he would do for what he promised to do. He has responded to some criticism sharply, which has caused some talk about the emergence of a "mean streak."

Abortion is an example of an issue on which Carter apparently feels he is getting a bad rap.

He said from the start he was opposed to abortion, but would do nothing to upset the Supreme Court's ruling permitting it in the first stages of pregnancy. He put his emphasis on federal programs that would prevent unwanted pregnancies, but never volunteered that he would oppose paying for abortions with Medicaid funds.

Defense is another area where he is getting heat. He started the campaign opposed to the B-1 bomber, later said he would continue research and development and hold up production. His final decision conformed to the latter position, linked to a conclusion that the cruise missile was a better weapon.

CARTER DOUBTLESS feels he has kept his promises on jobs by supporting public employment and seeking to beef up manpower programs. But there is no big administration push for the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill that Carter did pledge — with qualifications — to support last year.

There is a distinct feeling in Washington that the President is really putting his chips on business recovery rather than direct federal intervention to provide the solution to long term unemployment.

Because Carter consciously tried to take middle ground positions on many volatile issues last year, he was called "fuzzy," and suffered for it in the polls and election returns.

Now some of the same people — Democrats as well as Republicans — who accussed him of waffling during the campaign are claiming he made hard and fast promises to support specific programs.

That may seem somewhat unfair to Carter, but as he noted himself on the question of abortion for poor women, no one can guarantee equity in this imperfect world.

As one who has a great deal of respect for the practice of the "Socratic dialogue," I feel compelled to respond to Kathleen O'Malley's comments (August 2) regarding my letter on censorship (July 27). Her reply is flawed by contradiction, confusion, and misinterpretation, and I think some clarification is necessary.

First, Ms. O'Malley accuses me of "name-calling" (twice) and of making "unfounded innuendoes" and "cheap insinuations." Mind you, this was written by an individual who wants to "rid the issue of emotionalism." Instead of presenting her position in the form of some sort of logical argument, she lets her imagination run wild, bringing in "book-burnings" and "home invasions." These hints at 1984 or the Third Reich never even entered my mind while writing the piece. My fear is not one of storm-troopers rummaging through my personal library but rather one of being prohibited from purchasing or "checking out" publications of my choosing in the local stores or in the public library.

In addition to her vivid imagination, Ms. O'Malley approaches the whole issue of censorship (a very general issue) from an extremely narrow pragmatic point of view: "There is only one issue at hand right now, and that's the theater." Any kind of pragmatism which is not guided by a sound theoretical underpinning is always a danger, and one wonders how long "right now" will last? In light of these difficulties, I would like to reiterate the grounds on which my position was formed.

My challenge was directed only to the city council, and the use of the term 'moral do-goodism' was restricted to that group of individuals. The gist of my challenge was simply that I am extremely skeptical of the intention from which the obscenity ordinance was authored. Given the fact that one cannot look into another person's mind and observe what his or her intentions are, one is forced to draw conclusions from the person's linguistic, physical, and/or social behavior. The language of the ordinance was presented in a vague and subjective manner, a situation which could easily lead to an arbitrary application of the law. Not only am I critical of the subjectivistic, intuitionistic ethical theory exemplified by the council, but I also believe that legislators should, in their actions, express the 'general will' of the community at large.

The 'general will' is, indeed, something that is very difficult to gauge, but in light of the fact that there was no significant public outcry regarding the movies at the theater (no organized protests, no community forums, no leaflets in the mailbox, etc.), my original claim that pornography is a pseudo-issue has been affirmed. The fact that one family didn't purchase a house in the community is of no consequence to the issue. What is at stake here are not matters of fact but principles and points of logic.

Another equally problematic issue raised by the ordinance is that, in addition to the council's unique ability to perceive The Good, they evidently also have the ability to decide what has "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value." It seems to me that this is a great deal of power for a group of elected public servants to exercise. Perhaps they have special expertise in these areas?

Finally, some comments seem especially appropriate to Ms. O'Malley's letter. "Nice homes" and "exclusive subdivisions" do not necessarily make for a good community. As she points out in another context, there are no bookstores in Rolling Meadows. Perhaps this is indicative of something about the community itself. As for the "good schools," I have had the opportunity to see the product of this great educational system first hand, and it really makes one wonder. There is something bothersome about "college" students who have little or no command of English when that is their day-to-day language.

'Abortion a religious rights issue'

In a recent letter to Fence Post, Jim Finnegan of Arlington Heights tried to give the impression that anyone who supports free choice on abortion, must be a monster. In that, he indicts three of four Americans who support legal abortion.

Surely, millions of Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, Unitarians, Humanists and Jews must be saddened by that charge. So would members of the United Auto Workers Union, Friends of the Earth, American Veterans Committee and the American Association for University Women.

What Mr. Finnegan does not say is that four Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church speaking recently before a congressional committee, indicated that it is the desire of the Church of Rome to make their views on abortion "the law of the land."

Theologians and doctors have argued for 2,000 years over their respective views on abortion. What makes Mr. Finnegan or the four Catholic cardinals or the Pope, think they finally have the answer?

The infamous Hyde amendment which would deny medicaid funds to the poor, the blacks and the teenagers comes with ill-grace from congressmen who have voted themselves a generous raise to $57,000 a year and have the best medical facilities in the nation's capital.

The infamous Hyde amendment does not provide for an abortion to save the life of the mother; it does not provide for rape or incest; it does not provide for kidney disease. No wonder the A.M.A. is opposed to the Hyde amendment.

Finnegan forgets that abortion is not mandatory in a free America. Pregnancy is not mandatory either, but it might be if we millions who value religious freedom, sit by in silence while the Vatican helps to manipulate our American Congress.

Defense is needed against 'oil weapon'

by DR. JOSEPH P. STERNSTEIN

Americans have a tendency to give their full attention to a crisis for a day or two and then return to life "as usual." When President Carter introduced his message on energy to the American people in April, he spoke about a crisis that could overwhelm us.

How often since then have Americans riveted their attention on what they can do, along with the government, to cope with a situation that is putting into jeopardy America's freedom to conduct its international and domestic affairs free of foreign pressures?

Do Americans really understand the new force that has been created in world politics? It is not a country, or even a realignment of countries. Rather it is a three letter commodity — oil.

This new force has shaken world alliances and upset the economies of large and small nations. As a result of dependency in imported oil, the foreign policies of Europe and Japan have been influenced to satisfy the political attitudes of the Arab oil-producing countries. And, because of America's constantly increasing consumption of foreign oil, we are being subjected to the same pressures.

THE OIL WEAPON has been used through the Arab boycott measures, to interfere with the internal democratic processes by which the United States conducts its trade and business operations. Manipulation of oil prices and implied threats of a reduction in the supply of oil from the Mideast have put the greatest democracy in the world in the grip of Arab nations determined to influence our future and our relations with Israel, America's only democratic ally in the Middle East.

So, a sound U.S. energy program is a vital necessity which transcends partisan persuasions. The American economy requires huge supplies of energy. Without it, the tools and machinery of defense and of our industrial and agricultural production become idle. Subsequent unemployment could be disastrous.

Economic upheaval has a special and ominous connotation for minority groups, to which the history of Jewish communities all over the world can attest. Potential demagogues have always capitalized on economic and social disorder, in the process of which scapegoats are created to distract the population from real and valid issues.

It is an inevitable conclusion, then, that the United States simply cannot afford to be so dependent on such a distant and unstable region as the Middle East for energy supplies which are vital for its defense and home needs.

ONE MUST ASK "What are the options?" Certainly, the President's call for massive efforts for energy conservation must meet with firm and strong support from all Americans. President Carter recently has stated that if other measures fail, gasoline rationing might be imposed — certainly an equitable, and effective step in the battle against excess consumption.

No single change in American habits is the final answer, but a combination of efforts can give us important relief. With conservation, there must be an expansion of production of alternate energy resources. Coal, offshore oil, shale, natural gas and nuclear power must be exploited as quickly as possible if we wish to wrest ourselves from the hold which OPEC has on us.

OF THESE, probably nuclear power offers the only long-term viable answer. However, it is the least understood, and because of that, the most controversial of proposed energy programs. The fact is that there now are 64 licensed nuclear plants in the U.S. with a proven record of safety, reliability and economy. And, the arithmetic speaks for itself. Each nuclear power plant in operation saves the equivalent of 10 million barrels of oil each year!

CONSIDERING ALL the serious challenges we face, it is impossible to disregard these figures and what they represent in realistic terms.

In the light of recent evidence that France, West Germany the United Kingdom, Japan and the Soviet Union have committed themselves to further research and development of nuclear breeder reactors, and in the case of several of these countries, to their eventual sale abroad, one must wonder about U.S. opposition to development of these reactors in this country. Since the breeder reactor theoretically creates more plutonium than it burns, it is estimated to use nuclear fuel nearly 60 times more efficiently than the current "light water" nuclear plants in use today.

President Carter's objections to the breeder reactor are based on his fear that plutonium might be diverted by terrorists for use in weapons. Certainly, with the potential long-range economic benefits inherent in a technology which promises to produce relatively cheap electricity without using up finite sources of uranium, we cannot be stymied by the fear of terrorists.

Instead, we can take steps, on an international level, to guarantee safeguards. Thousands of nuclear weapons are stored in the U.S. and allied countries, ready for use. Yet, few would suggest that we jeopardize America's ability to defend herself by elimination of these weapons.

If we fail to meet the test of long-term, inexpensive, renewable energy sources which can serve as an alternative to oil, our continued economic strength, our role of leadership in technological development and our very independence as a democratic nation will be at stake.

This is the eleventh hour.

Carter looking to delegate duties

by GODFREY SPERLING JR.

At his last press conference the President was asked it he had done anything in the last six months that he would do differently if he could do it over again.

Here, with a reply that evoked laughter, Carter said: "In minor things, obviously, I have made mistakes. But to be perfectly frank, I don't personally care to point them out."

I like the apartment generally. Could you do something about the ceiling?

Then, when pressed, the President admitted that his dealings with Congress could have been more deft and that this was one place where he had learned from the past.

BUT FROM THE early days of his administration there have been those close to the President telling reporters privately he has another fault: that Carter was involving himself much too much in matters that could be delegated to others. Further, there have been indications in recent weeks that the President has been recognizing this tendency in himself.

Item: He has delegated more and more of his work to his vice president, even permitting Mondale to be the final decisionmaker in some designated areas.

Item: It is reported that Carter asked his long-time right-hand man, Hamilton Jordon, to become his chief of staff. Jordan, sources say, turned the job down simply because he didn't have a taste for that kind of work. It seems he felt he wasn't the right man for the job.

WHETHER THE President still is seeking a chief of staff is not known. But no President in memory has been doing what Carter has been trying to do: keep on top of every issue and every problem and, beyond that, remain the main cog in every presidential initiative almost from start to finish.

This President is not only the nation's chief executive, he is also its chief start-to-finish adminstrator. He needs someone to be his administrative chief, someone who constantly monitors the entire presidential operation, foreign as well as domestic, sees to it that there is coordination, and provides a prod to speed up the processes if he thinks it is necessary.

The President is, of course, a superb administrator. This assessment comes from his days as Governor of Georgia, even from his detractors.

Further, Carter looks upon his presidential role largely as that of being a good manager. And from his experience as a businessman he knows that a good manager must involve himself thoroughly in the intricacies of business operation.

THIS IS A President who will never be faulted for not doing his job, for not paying attention to details. No one will be saying that he is spending too much time vacationing or out on the golf course. In fact, one White House aide said the other day that Carter wanted to be remembered not only for what he does for the country but also for his "well-managed" administration.

Presidential aides who hope Carter will find a way of easing his burden, of sharing his administrative job, in no way want him to pull away from his intense interest in seeing that the presidency is well managed and in keeping up with the important matters and issues that face him.

But there seems to be a growing desire among those around him that the President find a way to withdraw from involvement in lesser matters and to find someone who can provide over all coordination for his administration.

It seems that the President now wants this, too — and that this is a lesson he learned from the early months in office.

Curbside friend greets thousands

"Let me live in my house by the side of the road And be a friend of man."
— S. W. Foss

Tom Tiede

GLEN BURNIE, Md. — Some years ago, when Albert J. Hardy retired, he walked out on his porch one morning to watch the rest of the world go to work. When a friend passed, looking beat in the commuter snarl, Hardy waved to cheer him on. And so it began, Al Hardy's post retirement avocation: roadside bonhomie.

Each day, a.m. and p.m., as the traffic lines up on Crain Highway, the 72-year-old Hardy comes out of his curbside home to greet it. Smiling, nodding, he deposits himself in the webbing of a wobbly lawn chair, stuffs his cheek with Red Man chewing tobacco, and waves joy and encouragement to a legion of motorists.

"Hi, babe."

Beep.

"Hello, brother."

Honk.

IT IS AN extraordinary ritual, and an altogether inspiring one. Some motorists are startled, others are suspicious, but few are unmoved. During rush hours Hardy will wave to thousands of passers-by, nearly all of whom wave back. "I'm sharing happiness," the old man explains, "when I see someone with no smile I give him one of my own."

Actually, it seems Al Hardy has little to smile about. Born a black man in the cruelties of the Old South, raised as a $2-per-day laborer on a shareceropper's farm, he is in the eighth decade of his life "poor as a one feather chicken," and partly crippled from the wretched effects of two rather severe strokes.

Yet, as he sees it, "God don't give us no burden we can't bear." Besides, he adds, a man of his age has no gripe coming: "Look at all these people what died in their 30s, or even in their 20s; brother, if you got a little pain when you're in your 70s, it just reminds you that you're still alive enough to feel it."

THAT HARDY FEELS his pain is obvious. He walks with a crutch, has a stiff right leg, and moves about his modest property with measured deliberation. But, no complaints. "If I get too tired, I maybe will fall asleep in the chair. But someone on the road will honk to remind me of my duty. Life is sweet when you ain't alone."

By no means is Hardy alone. In seven years as a roadside bonhomie he has waved to perhaps a half million motorists and personally befriended thousands of them.

"If I miss a day, some folks stop by to see if I'm okay." Others, after purchasing new cars, go slow past the Hardy home so that he will continue to recognize them.

Then there are those who bear him gifts. School kids bring the old man donuts, housewives stop off with coffee. Hardy appreciates the sentiment, but does not let it get out of hand. Once when a woman came by with a winter scarf, Hardy saw she did not have one of her own, and wrapped it gently around her shoulders with many thanks.

NOT EVERY motorist is considerate. Teen-agers have thrown pop bottles at Hardy. Rednecks have made obscene gestures. But the bonhomie turneth away wrath with a toothless smile: "I remember a boy who called me a nigger, and I just waved as usual: I guess he felt shamed about it, because that night he came to my house to apologize."

Hardy says the nasties are the exceptions. And he likes to think all motorists "got love in them, only some shows it less than others." He tells of drivers who have passed him for months, refusing to wave: "Then one day they'll lift a finger, or a hand, and pretty soon they smile and wave and honk their horn like everyone else."

In this latter respect, Hardy may be not so much a bonhomie as a cleric of a curbside ministry. "A smile is as good as a prayer," he says, and strangers who wave at each other engage in a meaningful religion. Indeed, at times, motorists do stop to talk to the old man, telling of personal worries and seeking advice or help.

NOT INCIDENTALLY, Hardy is a minister. He is a grade school dropout who returned to formal education late in life, mostly by way of bible school correspondence. Presently he is one of five pastors at a small church in nearby Baltimore.

The highway is a busy one. And therefore so is Hardy. He rises at 6:30 a.m. and waves until the lines thin. Then he catches the afternoon shoppers before bracing himself for the evening rush. Inclement weather may alter the schedule, but for it he is at his post six to seven hours a day, six days a week, the year round.

"I love them all," he says of the motorists, "they are just like family. This one woman, she come by throwing kisses at me; then the next day her husband come by and he threw kisses at me too. I said to myself this is getting good, so I started throwing kisses back. We got an orgy going now; this is the happiest highway in the state."

Joliet Center brings meat to your table

As we savor a sizzling steak or crisp piece of bacon at mealtime, it is easy to forget that today's meat and hams are yesterday's cattle and hogs, and that a major industry exists to bring them to our tables.

For many cattle and hogs, the journey to our plates begins at the Joliet Livestock Marketing Center in Joliet.

The market, which can be seen from I-55, is the only livestock market in northern Illinois and handles much of the locally raised livestock.

IN AN AVERAGE week, the market sells 10,000 cattle and 6,000 hogs.

Sales are made by brokers, who act as intermediaries for producers and packing companies.

The packers do not buy through auction, but by private agreement. Farmers and packers negotiate the sale through the broker after inspecting the animals.

The Joliet market opened in 1971 after the Chicago market closed. It is one of 11 markets serving the Midwest, drawing livestock from the central third of the nation. Markets in Omaha and Kansas City also draw a large portion of the Midwest livestock.

Joliet is a "gateway" for sales to the East Coast, says Harlan Bane, president of the market. Much of the meat for the East comes from packers who buy at Joliet, Bane said.

THE MARKET receives livestock 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The animals are housed in pens under a seven acre roof, where they wait from one to several days to be sold.

The market is open for sales Monday through Friday, when wholesale buyers representing the packers come to purchase the stock.

Once the animals are sold, they are trucked away to their fate at the packing plants.

The market employes nearly 200 persons to keep the operation running smoothly around the clock, Bane said.

When the buyers and sellers crowd in to haggle and make their best deals, that number swells quickly until the day's sales have been made.

THE NEW WINTER look from Paris is soft and roomy, as evidenced in this Guy LaRoche outfit. The coachman's coat features a capelet softly gathered around the yoke and the dress underneath also has a gathered yoke and ruffled hem.

DESIGNER HUBERT de Givenchy chose a full and loose "Mother Hubbard" look for his line, abandoning his usual narrow design. The wide look continued through evening pajamas like these with ballooning trousers wide enough for two.

CHRISTIAN DIOR showed mannish suits with either trousers or skirts for daytime in its fall and winter collection. Designer Marc Bohan used Scotch plaid menswear fabric for his suit with knife pleats in skirt for kilt effect.

HANAE MORI suit of ivory wool tweed is in line with Paris trend to ampleness. Underneath the snug waiter's jacket is an ivory silk ruffled blouse. Fox pelt slung over one shoulder follows the Paris craze for fox furs.

Russia out, China in Fashion parade in Paris

by ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Paris fashion is beginning to phase out Russia and has taken up China.

And the general look for next winter still ranges from soft and full to downright bulky and sloppy, but a minority look of tiny waistlines forecasts what might be the next silhouette change.

Those are the two main themes culled from five days of high fashion fall-winter collections staged by 25 salons for store buyers, manufacturers and fashion press from the world over.

The collections were a mixture of ethnic-folklore and straight — meaning braid, quilting, peasant blouses and ethnic prints and shapes are expected to filter down for some time to ready-to-wear inspired or copied by these designs for custom, handmade clothes.

THE BIG DIFFERENCE for the fall-winter season is that the Russian-East European gypsy-peasant look is out, except for Emanuel Ugaro, who kept some of his Tibetan paisley and braid, and the Lanvin salon which delivered peasantry in opulent lames and brocades for the most staggering fashion show of them all.

Yves Saint Laurent abandoned his Russian peasant girl of the past two years. He kept some Rusianness in costumes of the wealthy male merchants and boyars such as brocade fur-edged coats with tight waists and blousy tunics. Otherwise Saint Laurent took up China.

Press and buyers sat stunned at an incredible array of Chinese brocaded jackets, satin trousers, slit tunics, gold lame gloves with flared cuffs, fur edged boots, flying tassels, etc.

Since Saint Laurent is said by Paris fashion experts to influence 80 per cent of the world's ready-to-wear, the Chinese look is likely to be with us for some time.

ANOTHER influential designer, Hubert de Givenchy, dumped his Russian look of 1976 and went straight except for some subtle touches of China such as a Chinese scroll design appliqued in silk, leather or fur on to leather coats and velvet dresses.

Now and then the waist appeared. The Dior salon threw in an evening dress with a waist cincher. Wasp-waisted ballgowns were shown by Saint Laurent, Pierre Balmain and Pierre Cardin.

Givenchy molded the waist in multi-colored tweed mohair coats and soft jersey dresses with his new fullness bursting out below the waist in soft unpressed tucks and pleats.

Otherwise, the female form in the collections remained as last year — hidden.

FOR DAYTIME Saint Laurent draped his girls in 1914 skirts nearly to the ankle, long tunics, enormous shawls, long scarves and flowing capes with gigantic soods.

Givenchy's new full dresses could hide lots of sinful hot fudge sundaes and wide tunic tops over straight underskirts could be used happily by ladies-in-waiting.

Fullness fell from ruffled yokes in the Guy Laroche show.

Coats were more than ample at the Dior salon, Ungaro and elsewhere. Capes flowed at nearly all the houses with Laroche gilding the lily by showing two at a time. The collections drowned in a sea of stoles draped over coats, loose tunic tops, blousy dresses, swirling skirts, full sleeves, puffy shoulders.

ANOTHER TREND was that the real suit was very much around, the skirt softened by gathers or pleats in line with the ample look. Jackets appeared shorter, even at the classic house of Chanel, with some houses showing the waiter's jacket or little Spencer jackets.

The disquieting news for many women was that the suits were shown with skirts, not trousers, except at good, old Dior.

Saint Laurent, long a devotee of the classic trouser suit, did not show one.

Instead his daytime trousers were soft, ribbed pants gathered at the ankle and teamed with fur jackets. Givenchy emphasized daytime mid-calf culotte skirts teamed with suit jackets.

TROUSERS FOR evening, though, were popular. Skinny velvet and satin pants showed up but were outnumbered by the newest look of bloomers, ranging from knee-high page-boy knickers to longer vast bloomers of stiff taffeta. This bloomer idea got started last season and already has caught on with the "tout Paris" crowd here.

Zouave pants, harem pants caught at the ankle and wide evening pajamas also were offered at the collections.

Ruffles abounded. The Saint Laurent 1976 full dress with a wide flounce at the hem has filtrated into the other salons and may well be the big dress look for 1977. Ruffled edges also were used on taffeta evening capes, blouses, skirts, suit jackets.

There was lots of fur edging on armholes, hemlines, cuffs and collars. One barbaric touch at Saint Laurent was to use the entire fox pelt, head, feet and all.

THE BIG NEWS in accessories was the short boot, laced up at Dior and wrapped in leather lacings at Saint Laurent. Often these boots had flaring tops like Three Musketeer boots. Knee-high boots still flourished, from the crushed variety to stiff riding type boots. Heels were high on both boots and shoes. At several houses including Saint Laurent the high-heeled shoes had straps that wound up around the ankle.

Smooth, hard suit materials appeared at Dior, but the more common trend for the ample look was limp wool voiles, soft tweeds and fuzzy mohairs. For evening there were the usual chiffon and silk plus the newer stiff taffeta, faille, satin and velvet.

Colors generally were dark except for the dominance of burgundy and fuchsia. Pale gray was a big evening color.

NAIVE "GIGI" printed dresses billow over colored petticoats in the fall-winter collection of Christian Dior. Black velvet bows in the hair and black ribbon chokers at the neck add to the look. Note the hemline nearly to the ankles.

Separates getting big play

Harry Juster

Look smart

Sportswear separates are getting a big play for fall, with many of the men's wear designers expanding their collections of coordinated garments.

Day's, a specialist in this field, goes to flannels, tweeds and hopsacks in solids, plaids and herringbones for its related separates. One combination consists of a solid-color, three-button shooting coat with adjustable side tabs and a four-pocket sport vest and back-strapped slacks, both in matching plaids. Another features a bold, block plaid coat-style hacking shirt and solid-color, wide belt-looped slacks.

The nice thing about collections of this type is that it's easy to "do your own thing" in putting together a well-coordinated sport outfit.

Dear Mr. Juster: I am a widow and know very little about clothes for my teen-ager. He is in high school and wants a corduroy suit. Is this practicel? — Mrs. P. G. N.

Very much so. In addition to wearing it as a suit, he can use the coat with other slacks and the pants can be worn with other jackets or sweaters.

Incidentally, many of these suits feature reversible vests, and for a fairly nominal amount, your son would have a versatile, mix-and-match outfit.

Dear Mr. Juster: A fellow at work is trying to tell me it's better to wear a T-shirt style undershirt in hot weather because it soaks up the perspiration. That sounds like it might be uncomforable I think it's cooler without an undershirt, as there's less perspiration to contend with. Correct? — C.L.

Sorry, but eliminating an undershirt doesn't cut down perspiration. As I recently pointed out, by absorbing sweat, an undershirt keeps your regular shirt from getting clammy. Whether a T-shirt or conventional undershirt, you'll be more comfortable than with none at all in hot weather.

Dear Mr. Juster: I would appreciate it if you would settle a difference between my wife and me.

I have several suits with narrow lapels I bought in the 1960s. My wife says I should still wear them, but I say they're out of style. Who is right? — S. G.

You are. Suits with slim lapels have been out for quite some time. Now, as to whether you should continue wearing them, that's something for you to decide.

P.S. — I'm curious. Does your wife still wear her out-dated clothes?

FALL SPORT SHIRT FORECAST — The look is classic, with flannels and plaids leading favorites. Excello's side-vented, in-or-outer style, tailored of a flannel-like polyester, cotton and acrylic fabric in a gray, maroon and black plaid typifies this trend. Shirts of this character, teamed with corduroy, flannel or denim slacks will be a popular sight this fall.

Molded apparel predicted

You soon may not have a stitch on!

by WILLIAM COTTERELL

ATLANTA (UPI) — Textile researchers are very close to developing a financially feasible means of creating synthetic fabrics that can be molded into simple clothes without spinning and stitching.

Dr. W. D. Freeston, head of Georgia Tech's textile engineering department, said it may soon be possible for mills to make finished clothing out of raw fiber, skipping the weaving stage, by pinpoint application of minute fibers onto a mannequin like spray painting.

In an interview, Freeston said the work is still a few months away from developing a flat fabric. He said it will be a few years later still before the spraying process can be adapted to a contoured mold for ready-to-wear apparel.

THIS IS THE way a lot of forward-looking companies in the textile industry are going, though," he said. "In a way, we're doing it in self-defense. I'd be very much surprised if the Japanese aren't doing something in this field, because their government's spending an awful lot of money on textile research."

Freeston doubts housewives will ever be able to make clothes with a spray can. He said, however, that textile plants may soon be able to crank out underwear, draperies and utility clothes through a highly sophisticated spraying process.

Past attempts at sprayed synthetics came out like rubbery, congealed paint, with tiny pores in them, he said. Freeston said those fabrics lacked the strength sought in his three-year study. It is financed by the National Science Foundation.

"IN THE END, you aren't going to be able to tell the difference between the fiber-to-garment process and the woven fabrics," he said. "Initially, at least, it's probably not going to wear as long, so you'll be able to tell the difference that way."

He said the spray fabrics are going to "achieve the same geometry" as woven cloth that the previous attempts have missed by far.

Freeston said the fabrics "will never be high fashion" materials and that, therefore, "the military is very interested" in Georgia Tech's work. He said the process could make it unnecessary for the Army to store vast quantities of uniforms because spray-molding would reduce the "start-up time" when a sudden need arises.

FREESTON SAID that, in addition to the textile engineering school, the Georgia Tech aeronautical engineering and chemical engineering departments are working on the new fabric methods.

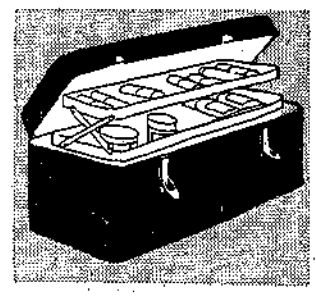

He said the textile industry is interested in the process as a means of holding down labor costs, and the International Ladies Garment Workers Union has shown an interest because "although it may mean fewer jobs, they'll be higher paying jobs."

Freeston said the new process would create many new jobs in the textile industry, to offset manpower losses.

"I think we should emphasize that we will always have woven fabrics, because their properties are indispensable," he said.

The doctor says

Faulty metabolism may cause ketones

Do small to moderate levels of ketones in urine from time to time signify anything of importance? No sugar has ever been found to be present. These levels seem to be connected to prior lethargy and disorientation, but not always.

I understand this may have something to do with carbohydrate metabolism. What role might diet, stress or genetics play?

I have been aware of these episodes since adolescence — over 20 years. Obviously they are not a life threatening condition.

Before I tested my urine I talked to a physician about these episodes of lethargy followed by an unusual smell of my urine but was laughed at and left feeling like a fool. I'm still curious. Can you shed some light on this puzzle?

Ketones are the incompletely metabolized products of fat metabolism. They include acetone and do have a fruity odor. If you severely restricted your carbohydrates forcing your body to use fats, the excess fat breakdown would produce excess amounts of ketones. This will also make your breath smell as if you had been drinking alcohol.

This result occurred when Dr. Atkins' diet fad was sweeping the country. You could smell the dieters even if they were not losing weight. To give you more information on diet and this problem I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-2, Low Carbohydrate Diet Fads. Others who want information on these diets can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. As this issue explains there is no advantage at all in forming and eliminating ketone in the urine. The chemical imbalance it signifies in these circumstances often leads to fatigue and faintness plus other important derangements in normal body function.

THE SAME THING happens to advanced diabetics who are not adequately controlled with insulin. Because the severe diabetic cannot use carbohydrates efficiently, he may be using excess amounts of fat causing ketosis. In advanced stages this leads to diabetic acidosis.

Several other conditions wherein the body does not utilize carbohydrates properly can lead to this problem. This includes alcohol consumption. The alcoholic may have low blood sugar because the alcohol interferes with the liver's normal mechanisms to maintain blood sugar levels. The body uses fat and hence produces ketones in the urine.

I think you should have a careful metabolic study. You may have a basic metabolism reason for forming excess amounts of ketones. And it could be important even though it is not life threatening. Meanwhile, I would suggest that you be careful to maintain a sensible balanced diet, getting more of your carbohydrates from fresh (preferably raw) fruits and vegetables while avoiding the concentrated sweets and starches. Be sure and get your carbohydrates, though, in healthy bulk cereals and the fruit and vegetable group. These are important sources of vitamins.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally, but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY. 10019.

Substitute for croutons are a dieter's delight

New Products Department: The soybean-based substitute for croutons has earned raves from the whole crew in this household. Even those who don't usually like highly spiced foods love this "Something Better Than Croutons." When the product was brand new and hard to find, I had to hide packages to stop random snacking so we'd have enough for the evening's soup or salad. The package label claims that these high-protein, unfried, low-starch cubes are also low in fats: they're a dieter's delight. They're usually hung up on specialty racks in produce departments.

Dear Roberta: I'm told that your mother had a great rose potpourri recipe. I never was interested before, but I am now because I have my own rose garden. Can I possibly get the instructions from you? — Gladys McEvoy That's among the many things I inherited. Anyone who wants a copy of my mother's recipe may have one by writing and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Roberta: Denim knee patches ironed on to kids' clothing when they are new will make those knee areas ever so much stronger. — Paula Cjrlton

Dear Roberta: Now, I'm delighted our dog failed to learn in training class to "hush" or "quiet" on command. After seeing scary stories in the papers about intruders getting into homes with false identification or uniforms, I'm pleased as punch our gentle and people-loving pup barks like a ferocious beast when a stranger comes near the house. Though she's never nipped anyone, we "hold" her back by the collar and let her bark away when someone unfamiliar comes in. — Karen Wall

A way to sober up

Females suffering whisky blues

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

Dr. Jean Kirkpatrick says her 27-year drinking spree ended when she "passed the seven-year mark on the sobriety trail."

The Quakertown, Pa., woman did it herself — minute by minute, day by day over a painful trail.

And all the while she was knocking down the urge to drink, she was building up the remnants of self-esteem.

Dr. Kirkpatrick nearly two years ago started Women for Sobriety — to help other female alcoholics go over the same trail to recovery.

She claims women drunks need their own program — one without men.

"There are differences between male and female alcoholics," she said in an interview.

"THE MEN HAVE wives who look after them and suffer with them for the sake of the children, for love. Or the boss tells the male worker: Straighten out or else.

"The women often are abandoned and must battle alone, if they can."

Women for Sobriety is an organization of women helping each other and themselves to overcome alcoholism through a changed way of thinking and living each day.

There now are about 200 branches in the 50 states. Dr. Kirkpatrick said there is a need for women with a two-year sobriety record to help lead other groups.

"It takes two leaders to a group," she said.

The Women for Sobriety program, now operates in hospitals, rehabilitation units, and clinics in addition to the regular groups meeting in homes, churches, schools, shopping malls and banks.

Shopping malls and banks?

"THE MALLS ARE preferred places," Dr. Kirkpatrick said.

"Women can go there to a meeting and no one ever knows that she's getting help from Women for Sobriety.

"Banks have community meeting rooms and these also are preferred places."

There are five million female alcoholics. Almost all have two things in common besides the drinking.

"The woman alcoholic is depressed beyond belief and you can't even measure her self-esteem — it's so low," Dr. Kirkpatrick said.

"Almost all the letters I get, and hundreds come in every week, describe depression and low self-esteem."

"These women are crying for help but there is a difference in the letters from the younger wives. They're not all that hung up on alcohol yet."

THE WOMEN FOR Sobriety program differs from the Alcoholics Anonymous one. The AA plan leans on spiritual strengths in the campaign to stop drinking, usually the cold turkey way. That is, stop now.

The woman program pushes a female alcoholic into a new lifestyle, from the inside out, building her self-esteem.

"There is the theory that we drink to make ourselves properly suffer because of the guilt we feel for having failed or even merely for existing.

"But it is after we have stopped drinking that we must learn a new kind of behavibr. We must learn how to be pleased with what we are doing, be pleased with ourselves."

"It is probably a sad commentary on the times when we realize that we must make an effort to feel happy about ourselves, that we must think about how really nice we are.

"BUT THIS IS what we must do. And we must make a consicious effort to be proud of ourselves. And a conscious effort to treat ourselves to something nice every week."

The woman must also try to be assertive.

"There is a connection, a very special and important connection between the low self esteem most drinking women know and non-assertiveness," Dr. Kirkpatrick said.

"Assertive behavior enables persons to act in their own best interests, to stand up for themselves without undue anxiety, to express their honest feelings comfortably, and to exercise their own rightouts without denying the rights of others."

Dr. Kirkpatrick said women reach for alcohol out of feelings of loneliness, depression, low self-esteem, sexual identity problems, death of a loved one, divorce, mid-life crisis.

Many hide their drinking. An estimated seven out of 10 are doubly addicted — being also on a sleeping or pep pill habit, too.

MOST ALCOHOLICS maintain the outward appearance of a normal life but use alcohol to diminish psychic pain.

The Women for Sobriety acceptance program includes the following statements:

- "I have a drinking problem that once had me."
- "Negative emotions destroy only myself."
- "Happiness is a habit I will develop."
- "Problems bother me only to the degree I permit them to."
- "I am what I think."
- "Life can be ordinary or it can be great."
- "Love can change the course of my world."
- "The fundamental object of life is emotional and spiritual growth.
- "The past is gone forever."
- "All love given returns two-fold."
- "Enthusiasm is my daily exercise."
- "I am a competent woman and have much to give others."
- "I am responsible for myself and my sisters."

Television Preview makes no friends

Hundreds of Chicago area residents have been receiving printed invitations from a firm called Television Preview, asking them to screen two program pilots being considered for national broadcast.

The voluntary, two-hour audience participation session is billed as "an important role in television" with the chance to function as "a member of the team that helped judge and evaluate them for final release over television networks and stations."

What Television Preview is really offering is the chance to evaluate potential television commercials.

IT IS A harmless but, nevertheless, deceptive practice that Northwest suburban residents should be aware of.

I joined the ranks of Television Preview participants one evening last week in a screening room on the 14th floor of the John Hancock Center.

It didn't take long for most of the approximately 200 people in attendance to figure out the real purpose of the gathering.

"Griffin and Phoenix; A Love Story"

More than half of the two-hour session was devoted to filling out questionnaires. The audience was queried about products appearing in commercials previewed along with two old television pilots.

ONE QUESTIONNAIRE pictured groupings of similar products that included cookies, candy, soda pop, salad dressing, floor wax, paper towels and disposable paper cups.

Participants were asked to indicate the product in each category they would "truly want," in case they happened to be one of the eight persons chosen at random to receive a bag of free groceries.

What was actually being sought was an indication of the brand of paper towel or dish soap participants preferred to use. Another questionnaire asked to detail the reasons for their choices.

Although names were drawn before and after the screenings for the free groceries, the winners would receive only a check in the mail for the value of the groceries.

WHEN THE lights went out, we were treated to two very old, rejected program pilots. The first was "The Nancy Dessault Show," starring the former hostess of ABC's "Good Morning, America." The second was "Two's Company" starring John Amos of "Good Times" and "Roots" fame.

Both comedies had been rejected by CBS during the 1973 pilot season and had reverted to being the property of the shows' producers.

A little research turned up the fact that Cave Creek Entertainment Cove, producers of the Dessault show, have gone out of business. The team of Ilson and Chambers, producers of "Two's Company," have also disbanded. The annoying thing about this whole arrangement is that the pilots are shown intact with commercials, "just like you would see them at home," a master of ceremonies for the evening said, and the commercials are obviously more current than the shows.

Participants were asked to complete one last questionnaire that included some general questions about the programs, but sought more detailed information on reactions to the commercials.

A FULL page was devoted to profiling the participant. Personal questions included age, sex, income, whether you owned your own house or car, and whether you did the grocery shopping on a regular basis.

The master of ceremonies for the preview continually played down the importance of rating the commercials. He continually emphasized that his company was in no way connected to the material being screened.

A discouraging climax to all this is that I have been unable to contact Television Preview executives. No telephone listing is available for the firm, which lists an Evansville, Ind., post office box.

Nor is there an Evansville, Ind., telephone listing for the firm's parent company, Advertising Research Systems.

The primary question that should be put to them is why Television Preview insists on misleading people as a means of carrying out what appears to be nothing more than marketing research?

If the firm is going to screen potential commercials, why not just tell people that? By showing the audience defunct programs and insisting their intentions are to screen potential television shows, the firm is insulting the intelligence of the participants.

A STEADY stream of people walked out during the preview session. This indicated to me that many of the people who gave up a weeknight to play television critic were disgusted with the approach.

It was a wasted evening for those led to believe they would help determine which television pilots would make it into the big time.

For that reason, it's the kind of experience that tends to leave people angry. That is a bad way to do business, no matter what you are peddling.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

• Some of the funniest moments of early television return as CBS continues its rebroadcast of "The Jack Benny Show" today at 7 p.m. on Channel 2.

• If you want a good cry, tune into "Griffin and Phoenix: A Love Story" at 8 p.m. on Channel 7. In it, Peter Faulk and Jill Clayburgh portray terminally ill losers at life who become winners at love.

• Wagner's 1843 musical drama, "The Flying Dutchman" airs on "Opera Theater" at 8 p.m. on Channel 11. The story of a doomed sailor saved by a woman's love and sacrifice is performed by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

Italian-American actors see stars rise on screen

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Blue-eyed box office toppers Clint Eastwood, Paul Newman and Robert Redford may find themselves running second to brown-eyed leading men, according to one actor who predicts a rise in the fortunes of Italian stars.

It may be wishful thinking on Paul Sorvino's part, but he points out that Robert DeNiro and Al Pacino have become superstars, not to mention Sylvester Stallone.

The Italian-American bunch are younger, too.

Sorvino and fellow paisano Tony Lo Bianca, moreover, are the stars of the new Warner Bros. film "Blood Brothers."

BROWN-EYED LEADING men of Italian heritage are not exactly a Hollywood novelty. Rudolph Valentino was the premiere screen idol of them all.

In recent years Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin haven't done badly either.

But Sorvino, a strapping man of 6-foot-3 and well over 200 pounds, is convinced that performers with swarthy complexions and names that end in vowels have been discriminated against.

He's not on a personal crusade, but Sorvino's feelings run deep. "For years we have lived with the English heritage on stage and in movies and in American society generally," he said.

"The Anglo-Saxon culture of suppressing feelings and staying cool has pervaded day-to-day life and is reflected in movies and television.

"NOW THINGS are changing. There's a new wave of emotional release. Americans are no longer afraid to allow other people to see their deepest feelings.

"It's no coincidence that Pacino and De Niro have come into their own. As Italians they were not taught to suppress their emotions. Neither was I.

"My role in this picture is very emotional. Tony and I play a couple of brothers in a rough and tumble expression of a certain strata of Italian-American blue collar workers. It's a story of what life is about."

He has studied opera for 20 years and dreams some day of starring on the boards of New York's Metropolitan.

A dramatic tenor, he envisions himself in "Tosca" and "La Bohemme." But Sorvino is not one to rush into things. "I'd start in Barcelona or somewhere where I could stand the test of failure."

OPERA CLEARLY is the perfect vehicle for Sorvino to give vent to his boiling Italian emotions. Movies are almost as good.

"Italians make good actors because performers try to experience emotions where most people look to avoid them," he said. "We enjoy creating and reacting to strong emotion.

"Acting is more wearing on the nerves than, say, accounting. But I thrive on it.

"In the beginning it was difficult for me to let the emotions out on stage or in front of the cameras. Now the whole range of anger, terror, happiness and love comes easy to me.

"The most delicate emotion to project is good humor and ebulliency. Because I am Italian, giving and accepting love is easy for me. The most difficult is viciousness. Again because I am Italian.

"I DON'T TAKE the emotional problems of my characters home with me. After a certain number of years an actor has his emotions under control. Yes, even Italian actors.

"I'm not saying all Italians would make good actors. It's just as ridiculous as the old belief that all Italians make great singers. But there is a large proportion of Italians who act and sing well

"Emotionalism is important in any culture. An Englishman shakes his son's hand when he goes off to war. An Italian father kisses his son warmly when he leaves for the corner grocery to buy a loaf of bread. That's the kind of thing I'm talking about.

"Americans are beginning to understand they needn't be ashamed to demonstrate an expression of feeling, to accept the booming laugh, the tears, the passion and fury. It's all part of life."

Inventors-aid firm charged with fraud

The Securities and Exchange Commission Monday charged Lawrence Peska Associates Inc. with securities fraud in connection with a program to help amateur inventors for fees in excess of $1,000. LPA is headed by Lawrence Peska. The SEC said Peska left the Raymond Lee Organization Inc., in 1972 when he changed LPA from an advertising agency to an inventor-oriented firm. Raymond Lee was cited Thursday by the Federal Trade Commission for allegedly defrauding inventors in a separate case. Ernest Barnes, a FTC administrative law judge, said Raymond Lee through "shrewd use of . . . exaggeration, inuendo, ambiguity (and) half-truths" misled inventors about Lee's qualifications. The SEC charged Peska used advertising and other promotions to attract inventor-clients for LPA, a New York-based firm that maintains offices in 14 cities (including Chicago,) Canada and Australia. In New York, Peska said he had not been served with the SEC complaint and could not comment until he knew the charges. Peska said LPA always operated with the advice of competent attorneys. "I know of no violations of the law," Peska said.

Healthy second half seen

The nation's purchasing agents see a healthy business picture for the second half of the year despite some fears that inflation may intensify, a survey showed Monday. The July survey by the National Assn. of purchasing management, however, indicted inflation pressures were diminishing, with the rate of price increases dropping for the fourth consecutive month. Of those agents surveyed, 47 per cent reported higher prices for goods, aainst 57 per cent in the survey a month before, while 12 per cent said they paid less, compared to 10 per cent the previous month. The NAPM said this marked the first time this year that those reporting increases were not a majority of the number responding to the survey. The 12 per cent reporting lower prices was the largest in two years, the association said.

Poor mail service recounted

Tales of business opportunities missed, pay checks undelivered and class reunions ruined because of slow mail service were recounted Monday at a Senate hearing on problems with the U.S. Postal Service. "This has been the worst year for mail delivery in our history," Gordon Marshall of McGraw-Hill Information Systems told a hearing chaired by Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H. He said his firm presorts mail and hand delivers it to the Boston Post Office before 6 p.m., but still has mail delivered weeks and even months late. Marshall said as a result, notices to bid which his firm sends out to the construction industry have been received after the bidding closed.

Justice delays regulation

Supreme Court Justcie Thurgood Marshall Monday refused to allow immediate application of a regulation which commodities dealers who trade on the London exchanges claim would put them out of business. The regulation was in a comprehensive package issued by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission last November. Designed to protect investors, it was scheduled to become effective Dec. 27, 1976, but has never been carried out because of the lawsuit now being fought. The challenge is being carried to the high court by British American Commodity Options Corp. and Lloyd, Carr & Co. They object to a requirement that they place in special bank accounts 90 per cent of the payments made by each customer until the customer's rights under his options are exercised or expire.

Consumers pay off record debt

Consumers paid off a record $16.33 billion of outstanding debt in June to slow the growth of consumer credit for the third consecutive month, the Federal Reserve Board said Monday. The board estimated the use of credit cards and other loans amounted to $10.6 billion in June. After payoffs, consumer credit increased a seasonally adjusted $2.28 billion. Since hitting a record $2.85 billion in March, the expansion in consumer credit has slowed in each successive month. The slowdown has coincided with an easing in economic growth, production and employment. Administration and private experts have been projecting less consumer spending with resultant smaller contributions to national economic growth. Although one report can not be used as proof of a trend, the developments in consumer credit during June appear to coincide with other economic measures.

Better farm prices promised

A federal agriculture official told one of the Midwest's largest farmers organizations Monday the policies of the Carter administration will provide farmers a "better price for their production." Deputy Agriculture Sec. John C. White addressed the 10,000 delegates to the annual convention of the Midcontinent Farmers Assn., Columbia, Mo., saying 1977 marks a turning point in federal policies affecting agriculture. "We're not going to just complain about market prices being so critically low," White said. "We're going to use the tools of the new food and agriculture legislation to get farmers a better price for their production."

Consumer safety gathers steam as federal agencies join forces

The U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission already has taken on the aspirin industry and the children's sleepware business. It has won both battles.

For American consumers, those victories have meant child-proof lids on aspirin bottles and a ban on children's sleepware treated with Tris.

And Barbra Hackman Franklin, the panel's senior member says the commission plans further forays in the name of consumer safety.

Power mowers, public playground equipment, baby pacifiers, television sets and upholstered furniture are among the commission's next targets, Ms. Franklin said Monday.

She said the commission is giving high priority to safety rules governing products containing free-form asbestos, which can be fatal if inhaled in large quantities. Fake fireplace embers contain the asbestos and will be the topic of public hearing in Washington, D.C., Monday.

Sharp edges on children's toys, aluminum wire, paint containing lead, bicycles and even matches are in the high priority category.

BARBARA H. FRANKLIN

DESPITE SOME manufacturers' complaints, there's more to the business of singling out consumer product safety hazards than tossing darts for random selection, Ms. Franklin says. The frequency and severity of consumer injuries, chronic illness and future injury, the vulnerability of the population, and probability of their exposure to a hazard are considered.

Ms. Franklin says she is mindful of business executives' complaints that they've been swamped by costly, conflicting government regulations. She has taken the lead in calling for a cooperative approach to consumer protection.

A single federal policy for identifying and regulating potential carcinogens (cancer-causing agents) is needed in the U.S., Ms. Franklin said in a letter sent during April to President Jimmy Carter. Several agencies, including her own, share jurisdiction over cancer-causing chemicals.

JUST LAST WEEK, the Consumer Product Safety Commission joined forces with the Environmental Protection Agency, Food and Drug Administration and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, to announce a new plan for streamlining their efforts to protect the American workers and public health.

Ms. Franklin, says she believes it will be a major step toward effective and reasonable regulation of consumer product safety. Limits on the public's exposure to vinyl chloride and a proposed regulation for benzene exposure are on the drawing board.

"After our experience with Tris, it became clear that to me that there is a need for uniformity of definitions," Ms. Franklin said. A recent ban on the use of the flame retardant Tris has caused widespread criticism among manufacturers and retailers of children's clothing.

At the same time, Ms. Franklin says, she shares the small business owner's concern about too much regulation and red tape. Putting manufacturers out of business will lessen competition and lead to higher consumer practices, she says.

ONE OF THE AGENCY'S weak point is that it hears more frequently from organized consumer and business groups, than the individual consumer or small business owner. Ms. Franklin says the agency encourages public comment, through regional offices in Chicago and other cities.

Ms. Franklin has served on the CPSC since it was founded by Congress in 1973 to reduce consumer product safety risks. She previously sereved as a presidential assistant in the White House, launching a program to recruit women for top government policy-making jobs.

Ms. Franklin also served as vice president of First National City Bank of New York, where she directed corporate planning activities, following a stint as a Singer Co. executive.

Automakers shun low public image

DETROIT (UPI) — It no longer surprises Detroit automakers that their credibility is at an all-time low. But they still can't accept it.

The new Democratic administration in Washington is giving them fits and is not bashful in saying Detroit is not to be believed.

The new United Auto Workers president, Douglas A. Fraser, has told Detroit to "get up off its behind" and compete with the foreign automakers.

EVEN THEIR own surveys tell auto executives the American public's No. 1 gripe is autos and auto service.

"The industry doesn't seem to get much credit for what we've achieved," General Motors President Elliott M. Estes lamented to a recent Automotive News World Congress.

But two other speakers — Joan Claybrook, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration director, and Eric O. Stock, Environmental Protection Agency deputy administrator — said the industry does not deserve much credit.

Ms. Claybrook, tabbed the "Dragon Lady" by some automotive types, said Detroit had an eight-year honeymoon under the Republicans. She said it's over and then chided automakers' "stubborn unwillingness" to make cars safer.

"EVEN WHEN government safety standards were issued," she said, "some manufacturers employed designs which all but undermined the effective use of the safety device."

The current fuss over 1978-model clean-air standards, with Detroit's implied threat to close the auto plants if it is not granted a delay, is a prime example of the believability gap.

"The industry's tune has not changed," Stock said. They said the same thing when auto emission standards were first proposed more than a decade ago. "'This far, but no further' continues to be the enduring chant from Detroit."

"Yet," he said, "Detroit has cried 'wolf' so many times when there was no wolf that not many people take Detroit seriously."

CM's Estes traces the industry's difficulties in the credibility area to its early dealings with Washington.

"We found ourselves pictured as negative and obstructionist, delaying the introduction of safer, cleaner-running, more efficient cars," he said. "It's an almost unbelievable position for us to be in."

Isle of Man mouse roars for capitalism

Louis Rukeyser

ISLE OF MAN — To those who bothered to notice it at all, the Isle of Man has been regarded as a quaint Ruritania improbably plopped into the middle of the Irish Sea — lovely to look at, delightful to visit, but about as relevant to the late 20th Century as a thatched roof.

Now, however, this little Celtic island of harbors and hills has become a fascinating example of the mouse that roared — for the word it decided to roar was, capitalism. And the word worked.

While retaining a system of social services comparable to those on the British mainland, the Isle of Man has moved strongly against the trend toward economic socialism — and in the process has created what the London Sunday Express has just called wonderingly "a paradise island."

EVEN TO AMERICANS, it sometimes seems just that. Consider a place where the rate of income tax is a flat 21¼ per cent (after deductions), where there is no inheritance tax or capital gains tax or corporation tax, where the government goes out of its way to encourage the success of private enterprises — and where the unemployment rate, not at all coincidentally, is down to 1½ per cent.

Like another British colony — Hong Kong — the Isle of Man has demonstrated dramatically what an offshore unit can accomplish when it grants its citizens and foreigners economic freedoms unknown on the mainland.

As recently as the 1960s, it was a different story on the Isle of Man: a backwater community of 47,000 whose younger inhabitants were leaving on every boat because they couldn't find employment at home. With the island's finances tied to Britain's under a 1957 Common Purse agreement, with every act of the thousand-year-old Manx parliament subject to veto by the British Home Office, the future seemed to be downhill at best.

But the Manx always have been an independent and resourceful people; their three-legged symbol carries a motto that translates: "Whichever way you throw, it will stand." And there began to be rumblings in Tynwald, the island's parliament, to the effect that if Britain went into the European Common Market, the Isle of Man should go it alone. London laughed — at first. But then, wonder of wonders, this tiny island had negotiated its own deal with Europe: in for trade, out for taxes.

The way was cleared for the Isle of Man to become a tax haven—an often-pejorative description that the islanders embrace wholeheartedly. (The deputy assessor of income tax, who should know, called his 1975 book on the subject "Anatomy of a Tax Haven.")

BUT THE ISLE of Man is a tax haven with a point: to bolster the local economy by encouraging the right kind of foreign investment. To obtain the lavish government grants available to outside businessmen, William Dawson, treasurer, said you have to prove not only that your operations will not pollute the preindustrial island air, but that they will be (1) profitable, (2) adding a high value to your product ("so we'll have something to tax"), (3) providing jobs for Manxmen and (4) offering the eventual hope of a local takeover.

In return, you get a stable society (the population is up to 62,000 now, as part of a planned increase to 75,000) with a remarkably low crime rate, a national debt of zero and an increasingly independent government convinced that, as chief financial officer Percy Radcliffe put it to me, "Our job in here is basically to run a business."

Not that the usual temptations to politicians are absent on the Isle of Man. But as Radcliffe said when introducing his latest hold-the-line budget this past spring, "To allow the taxpayer to exercise control over a larger share of his money, Government must restrain itself from the constant temptation to extend control over the lives of citizens. Constant and additional intrusions into the lives of individuals inevitably result in additional public expenditure."

We may have to start calling it the Isle of Wisdom.

Dismal Dow sinks to 19-month low

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market fell to its lowest level in 19 months Monday in a sharp setback sparked by rising interest rates. Trading was the slowest in six weeks.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a .52-point gainer Friday, plunged 9.27 points to 879.42, the lowest level since it closed at 877.83 on Jan. 5, 1976 when the market was headed sharply higher.

The closely watched Dow average, which lost 1.38 points overall last week, has plunged 125.23 points, or more than 12 per cent, since the first of the year. Institutions have sold basic-industry stocks because they fear an economic slowdown later this year.

MONEY WATCHERS triggered selling by speculating the Federal Reserve Board will tighten credit because the nation's basic money supply, although it declined $1.5 billion last week, has risen sharply over the past month.

Short-term interest rates rose during the day. This inflationary action conflicted with a purchasing agents' survey that showed price increases for goods fell sharply in July.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index shed .38 to 53.66 and the average price of a common share dropped 23 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, fell .77 to 97.99.

Declines routed advances, 951 to 474, among the 1,859 issues crossing the composite tape. The Big Board volume of 15,870,000 shares, down from the 19,940,000 traded Friday, was the slowest turnover since 15,736,420 changed hands May 27. Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 18,412,630 shares, compared with 23,245,240 Friday.

Dow Chemical was the most active NYSE issue, off ¼ to 31 3/8. Middle South Utilities was second, off ¼ to 16¾. Firestone was third, off ¼ to 18½.

General Motors, trading minus its divident payment, was the fourth most active issue, off 58 to 66¾. Other auto issues were mixed.

Pirates stun Cubs in 9th

PITTSBURGH — Few people will ever know what Bobby Murcer and Jerry Morales said to each other in the outfield after giving chase to Ed Ott's triple in the ninth inning Monday night.

But frustration rarely gives birth to kind expressions, and it was frustration that was written all over the Cubs' faces as they walked dejectedly to the clubhouse. Ott's long drive to right-center sent pinch-runner Phil Garner scurrying home with the winning run in a 7-6 Pirate victory.

That drops the Cubs to 1½ games behind the Phillies who were losing a meaningless exhibition game with the Twins Monday afternoon. The Pirates are 2½ back.

FOR A SHORT while, it looked like the Cubs would break the jinx that visiting teams have had in Three Rivers Stadium in recent weeks. At home, the Pirates have now won 14 straight and own a 39-14 record for the season.

Rick Reuschel entered the ninth inning with a 6-5 lead. He was going for his 16th victory, but Pittsburgh quickly restructured those plans.

Omar Moreno opened the ninth with a long double into the same area Ott was to later grace with his triple.

RENNIE STENNETT, a pinch-hitter, was the next Pirate to face Reuschel. He blooped a hit into short left field that was almost caught by Larry Bilttner. The frustration was beginning to show.

"If Bilttner catches that ball, we're still in the game," said Herman Franks, the Cub manager. "He broke back and then he comes in, had it in his glove and then he drops it."

After a sacrifice fly by Jim Fregosi tied the score, Dave Roberts replaced Reuschel. Pirate manager Chuck Tanner defied the percentage and stayed with Ott, a left-handed hitter.

"I saw a sign that said, 'When you're Ott, you're hot.' So I let him hit," Tanner said of his wise decision.

OTT RESPONDED and sent the Pirate fans home with smiles on their faces. Frustration followed the Cubs to the hotel, and Franks admitted that Bruce Sutter is a much-needed commodity.

"There's where we missed that guy," Franks said, referring to his ace reliever, who is on the 21-day disabled list with a painful shoulder. "In fact, I have him coming into pitch the eighth and the ninth."

Early in the game, it looked like Reuschel would need more than short relief. The Pirates hit the ball hard in the opening inning, building a 3-0 lead on four hits.

Two solo shots by Bobby Murcer narrowed the margin to 3-2 with Reuschel getting stronger. His main problem was the first pitch to each batter.

"THESE GUYS (the Pirates) are hacking away from the first pitch," Reuschel said. "I was trying to get the ball over the plate on the first pitch. If they are going to hit it, they might as well hit the first one."

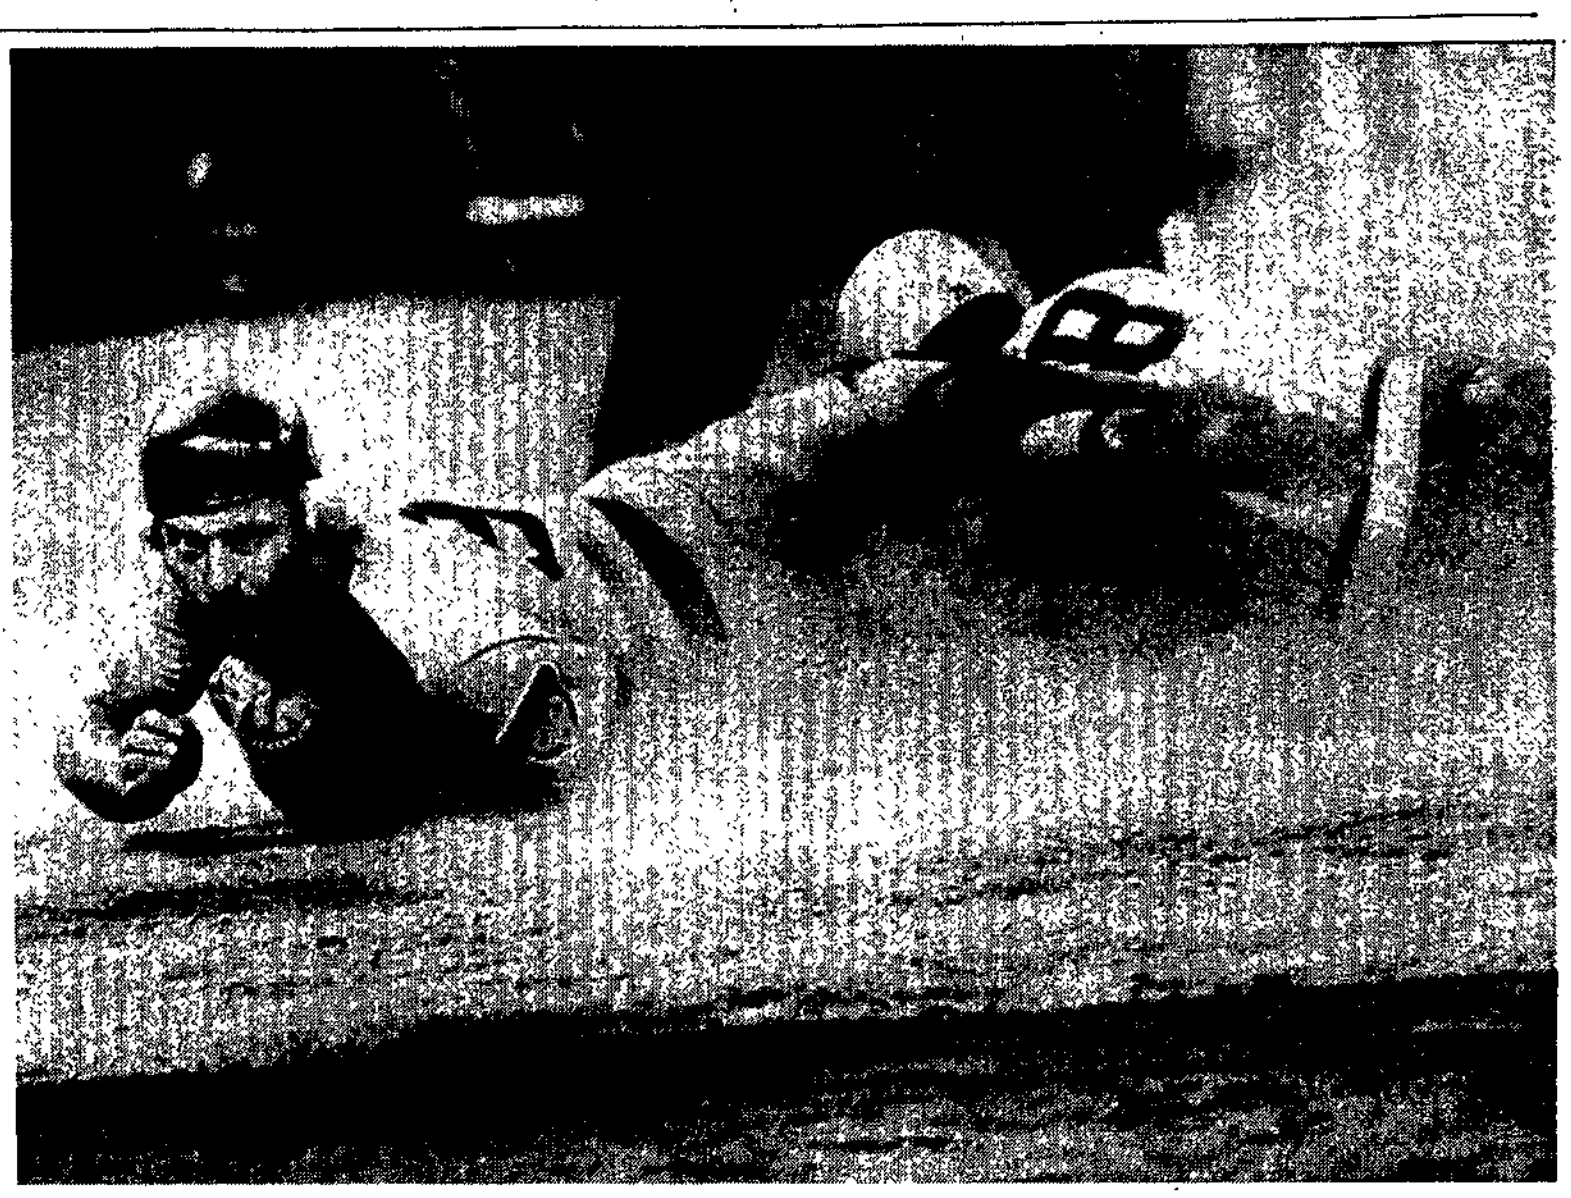

The score was 4-2 going into the seventh, the extra run coming on a homer by Fernando Gonzalez in the sixth. The Cubs forced Tanner to replace starter Bruce Kison in the seventh.

That's when the Cubs took their only lead of the night by scoring four runs. Steve Ontiveros started it all with a double before Manny Trillo reached on a bunt single. Tanner then went to Rich Gossage, and the move wasn't as smart as the one he would make later.

Pinch-hitter Gene Clines greeted Gossage with an RBI single. Following that, Reuschel sacrificed the runners to second and third.

IT WAS A NEEDLESS move because Ivan DeJesus powered a Gossage pitch into the left-field stands to give the Cubs a 6-4 advantage. The tree-run shot was only the third homer of the year for DeJesus.

The Pirates came back with one run in their half of the seventh with the help of Frank Taveras' 40th stolen base. He led off with a walk, stole second and went to third on a ground out. He eventually scored on Dave Parker's single.

WHERE'S THE BALL? Cub catcher Steve Swisher looks around in the dust for the elusive baseball after dropping shortstop Ivan DeJesus' relay throw in the first inning Monday night. Bill Robinson scored the third Pittsburgh run of the inning on the play to give the Pirates a 3-0 advantage. Pittsburgh scored two runs in the ninth to win, 7-6.

Odd couple helps Sox stay on top

by BOB GALLAS

It was an odd combination. A pitcher on the verge of quitting baseball and a hitter who rarely gets a chance to bat against righthanded pitching.

But that was the combinaion that snapped a three-game losing streak with a 5-4 win Monday night at Comiskey Park as Lamar Johnson homered to break a 4-4 deadlock in the bottom of the ninth innig.

Johnson who was filling in at first for Jim Spencer, sidelined with an injured wrist, hit two homers Monday, both off righthanders. But it was his dramatic blast with one out in the bottom of the ninth off reliever Enrique Romo that brought the entire Sox bench to home plate to meet him.

JOHNSON, WHO platoons with Oscar Gamble as the designated hitter and plays only when a lefthander is pitching, looked bad swimging and missing against some of Romo's breaking pitches. But he still ran the count to 3-2.

"With a 3-2 count, I was just trying to make contact," said Johnson, who ripped his 13th and 14th round trippers of the season.

Randy Wiles, a lefthander just up from Iowa, got the win, his first major league victory. Wiles got the final two outs in the ninth when starter Francisco Barrios, who had pitched brilliantly, was tapped for the typing run.

Wiles, acquired in an off-season deal with the Cardinals, who got infielder Tony LaRussa in return, was contemplating quitting baseball if he didn't make it to the majors this year. In his first big league appearance Sunday, he gave up the hit that let in the lead run at Kansas City, who won the game.

"I WASN'T overly surprised they came right back to me," said the 25-year-old blonde. "I was throwing strikes Sunday. They just happened to hit one of them.

"I was awfully nervous Sunday but felt great tonight. I'm glad they did come back to me. It shows me they have some confidence in me."

Johnson's two homers, which drove in three runs, and another home run by Oscar Gamble, a solo shot in the seventh off starter Bob Galasso, covered up some Sox defensive lapses that could have cost the game.

A throwing error by catcher Jim Essian let Ruppert Jones turn a stolen base into a two-base advance that put him at third and set up the first Mariners run in the second inning. Jones scored on a safety squeeze bunt by Steve Braun.

JORGE ORTA'S fielding error in the fifth on what would have been the final out put runners at first and second for Seattle but Barrios pitched his way out of that jam.

But it was two "non-errors" in the sixth that helped the Mariners tie the score at 3-3 with two runs.

With runners at first and third, Jones flied to Ralph Garr in medium-deep left field, however Garr's throw home was way wide, allowing the run to score and the runner at first to go to third. The next hiter,t Carlos Lopez, singled to Garr, whose throw in was weak, the run scoring and Lopez heading for second.

LEMON DID not criticize Garr but did say afterward that he'd probably "rest" Garr today in the final game of the Seattle series, starting Royle Stillman instead.

Stillman filled in in right field for Richie Zisk Monday and was 0-for-3. Zisk scraped his arm on the artificial turf at Kansas city, but will probably be available for duty today.

The win gave the Sox a full game lead over the idle, second-place Twins.

The Mariners tied the game in the ninth when Lopez tripled to the far reaches of center field after one out. Barrios walked the next man he faced and that brought Lemon to the mound, for what most thought would

BUT BARRIOS remained to give up a single that drove home the tying run.

"I asked him how he felt and he said fine, so I left him in," explained Lemon. "I wanted Frankie to win since he had pitched so well."

Rookie Bob Galasso, who went 7-1/3 innings, was equally impressive. Both starters had stretches were they retired 11 straight. Galasso struck out six and walked nobody during his stint.

THE THREE HOMERS tied a club record for home runs in a season, 138 set by the 1961 and 1971 White Sox. The Sox now have 64 season wins. That ties the number of wins they got all last season.

"I hope we break both of those records," Lemon quipped. "Tomorrow."

Bears put Hrivnak on waivers

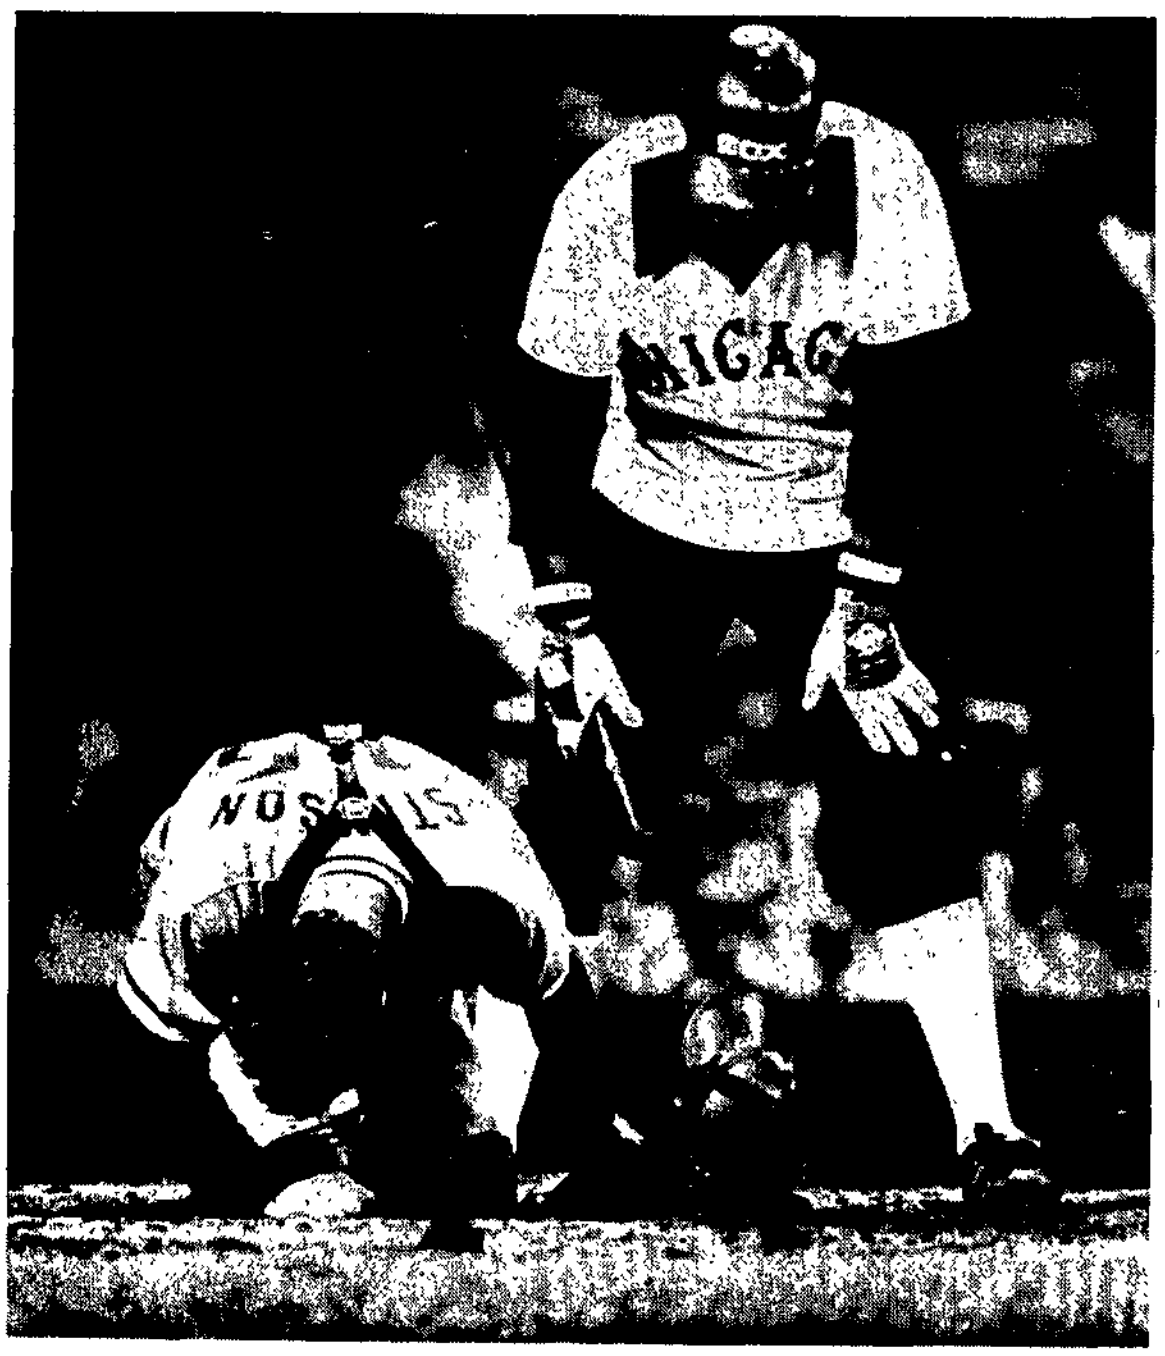

The Chicago Bears Monday put defensive tackle-end Gary Hrivnak on waivers to reduce their squad to 65. Another five players must be cut today.

Hrivnak, from Purdue, was the Bears' second round choice in the 1973 draft. He was on the injured reserved list for the entire 1976 season because of an achilles tendon injury.

The Bears also gave free agent running back Rod Wellington, from Iowa, a one-day trial Monday. Wellington was drafted by the Kansas City Chiefs in 1976 and also had a tryout last year with the Dallas Cowboys.

Injuries continued to plague the Bear training camp at Lake Forest College. Starting offensive left tackle Lionel Antoine reinjured his left knee, forcing regular right guard Jeff Sevy to make the switch. Antoine has had chronic problems with the knee and has missed several practices already this year.

First-round draft pick Ted Albrecht, Noah Jackson and Revy Sorey have been alternating at the two guard spots. Another casualty was starting right tackle Dennis Lick. Reserve Dan Jenkins has been pressed into action at the position. Lick is doubtful for the Bears' exhibition game against the Oakland Raiders Saturday.

WHITE SOX hitting hero Lamar Johnson tries to comfort Seattle catcher Bob Stinson who winces in pain after being hit by foul ball. Johnson's two home runs led Chicago to a 5-4 victory at Comiskey Park Monday night.

Logan Square is team to beat

by VIC NOVAK

Arlington Heights kept its hopes alive in the Cook County American Legion baseball tournament by defeating Wilmette, 6-3 at Recreation Park in Arlington Heights Monday night.

The victory advanced Arlington to the evening's second game against Oak Lawn. The second game winner plays Logan Square for the tournament championship at Recreation Park at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The first game left Arlington fans clutching their hearts. Trailing 6-2, Wilmette staged a dramatic two-out, ninth-inning rally that knocked out Arlington starter Kevin McBride.

Wilmette's Harry Eberts doubled to left, took third on Brad Cloud's single and scored on Jeff Wilder's single. The bases filled when Steve Sonen singled, the visitor's third straight right-field hit.

Arlington manager Lloyd Meyer replaced McBride with Dough Harth. Harth induced John Rosenblum to pop out to end the game.

McBride pitched a gutty game. He spaced 12 hits in eight and two-thirds innings while walking four and striking out five. Five Arlington errors kept Wilmette in the game.

Arlington miscues helped the vistors seize a 1-0, fifth inning lead. An error by Arlington third baseman Dennis Drolet, the first of two catcher interference calls on Gary Kempton, a fielder choice by John Cullen and Jeff Nielsen's single scored losing pitcher Ray Mals with the run.

In its half of the fifth inning, Arlington pounded out five runs on six hits against Mals.

FRANK DeSIMONE started the Arlington scoring parade with a double and crossed on Gary Kempton's single. Dan Frase walked, loading the bases for John Vukovich.

Wilmette played its infield in and Vukovich drilled a rightfield single scoring Mayerck and Kempton.

Arlington's Paul Lundstedt singled home Frase for run No. 4. After two outs, Mike Jennings singled in Vukovich for the fifth Arlington run.

Wilmette scored a seventh-inning run and Arlington picked up one in the eighth to complete the scoring.

THE ONE-HIT pitching of Tim Prokof put Logan Square in the tournament finals when the Lions defeated Oak Lawn 13-0 late Sunday night. The only hit allowed by Prokof was an eighth-inning, bat-handle grounder that got by the outstretched glove of Mike Ledna at second base.

Logan Square scored four runs in the fourth inning and added six more in the sixth and three in the eighth to support Prokof, who struck out 12 while walking three Oak Lawn batters.

Kansas City loses ground to Sox

From Herald Wire Services

Bobby Bonds' 27th homer of the year, a two-run shot in the seventh inning, highlighted California's 7-2 victory over the Royals Monday night to complete the Angels' a sweep of a doubleheader following a 6-4 first game victory in Kansas City.

Wayne Simpson, 6-8, went 7 1/3 innings against his exteammates, allowing just six hits as the Angels built a 6-0 lead. Walks by Dyar Miller forced in the only two Kansas City runs in the eighth.

Gil Flores collected four hits, scored two runs and knocked in another while Bonds accounted for three RBI with his homer and a fifth-inning sacrifice fly in sending Paul Splittorff down to his sixth loss against nine wins.

Major league baseball

Consecutive run-scoring singles by Mario Guerreo, Rance Mulliniks, Terry Humphrey and Flores in the second inning propelled the Angels to their opening game win, enabling Nolan Ryan to become the AL's first 16-game winner.

At Arlington, Tex., — Toby Harrah, whose round-house right to the face of Oakland pitcher Jim Umbarger ignited a brawl in the first game, started the first triple play in Texas history in the second game that helped carry the Rangers to 5-2, 3-0 doubleheader sweep ovr the A's.

The two wins brought the Rangers to within 2½-games of the White Sox in the AL West.

Ken Reitz slammed a two-out three-run homer off Jerry Koosman in the ninth inning to carry the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-2 victory over the New York Mets at New York.

Eric Rasmussen started for the Cardinals and allowed three hits over seven innings. Koosman, 8-12, went the distance for New York.

Veteran left hander Tommy John fired a two-hitter and hit his first National league home run for his seventh straight win in leading Los Angeles to a crucial 4-0 victory over the fading Cincinnati Reds which snapped a four-game Dodger losing streak.

The Dodgers increased their lead over the Reds in the NL West to 12½-games in the opener of a pivotal four-game series between the two division rivals.

Andres Mora blasted his sixth home run, Eddie Murray doubled across a run, and Lee May and Mark Belanger added run-scoring singles to help the Baltimore Orioles snap a three-game losing streak with a 6-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians at Baltimore.

At Detroit — Rusty Staub drove in two runs and scored another in a five-run second inning to key a 6-1 victory by the Detroit Tigers over the Milwau kee Brewers at Detroit.

Warren Cromartie singled home Chris Speier in the eighth inning to lift the Montreal Expos to a 6-5 victory over the San Diego Padres at Montreal.

Joyce charges to Illinois Open lead

by JEFF NORDLUND

A golfer from the never-never land of golfdom rushed to the first round lead of the Illinois Open Championship at the Elgin Country Club Monday.

Marty Joyce, trying to make a living in golf as neither a touring pro nor a club pro, shot a 69 to put him a stroke ahead of five challengers including Barrington amateur Gary Hallberg.

The low 80 scorers from Monday's field of 143 will wrap up the championship today, playing 36 holes.

"LAST JUNE I tried to qualify for the pro tour at Pinehurst, but there were 420 golfers there looking for just 20 spots," Joyce, 26, said. "That isn't good odds, no matter what the game.

"That trip cost me $1,000 — a lot of money. I may try again when the qualifying comes to Indian Lakes in September, but right now I want to concentrate on this tournament.

"I've been making my money by playing in small satelite tournaments, like the Waterloo Open which was played the week the Western Open was here. It's kind of tough for me, because I don't have a tour card, and I'm not a member of the Illinois PGA.

"I like this game, and I'd eventually like to find a place in it," the Elmwood Park resident said.

ALONG WITH Hallberg at 70 are Mike Milligan from Medinah, Bernardi-point leader Steve Benson from Glen Oaks, Ray Williams from Oak Park and amateur John Baldwin from Exmoor.

Five golfers are at 71, and four more including Bill Ventresca from Rolling Green and Chris Marszalek of Arlington Heights, are even-par 72.

Hallberg, playing the course for only his second time, had an erratic round. He had 32 on the back nine and 38 on the front, although the back nine is par 37 and the front just 35.

"THE COURSE WAS in good shape, considering all the rain we've had," Hallberg, 19, said. "But I did hit a lot of flyers from the fairways, because the grass was a little long.

"I got my round going on the back nine. I had six birdies, two bogeys and one double-bogey — that was on the eighth hole. I hit my drive behind a tree so that I had to hit left-handed to get out. Then I chipped on and still three-putted."

Because of the rain, the start of Monday's round was delayed until the afternoon when the golfers went off on different tees simultaneously. The round took the entire field six hours to complete.

"The wait wasn't so bad," Hallberg said. "I'd prefer to play faster, but it doesn't bother me too much. Really, the thing that hurt me was the couple three-putts I had."

DEFENDING CHAMPION Dennis Sullivan from Minne Monese finished the first round at 74. Another former champion, Emil Esposito from Mount Prospect, had 75.

Bob Zender, Illinois PGA champion the last two years, was entered in the Open but withdrew. He is preparing to compete in the National PGA Championship.

O.J. to rejoin Bills following eye exam

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills said Monday star running back O. J. Simpson was expected to resume practice with the team today after eye tests at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore showed a benign tumor.

Doctors at Johns Hopkins' Wilmer Eye Institute said "examinations showed a benign self-limiting condition beneath the center of vision of the left eye."

Concern mounted during the past week over the cause of blurred vision in Simpson's left eye. The running back, who was struck over the eye by a blow from New York Jets defensive back Burgess Owens during a game last season, did not travel with the team to Pittsburgh for Saturday's opening pre-season game.

"The disorder usually heals itself within a short period of time," the doctors said. One of the examining physicians, Dr. Walter Stark said, "The same disorder appears in a lot of healthy young people."

Vilas wins fourth straight tennis title

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas won his 22nd straight match and fourth straight tournament Monday night with a powerful 6-2, 6-4 victory over Roscoe Tanner in the final of the $85,000 Mutual Benefit Life Open.

The victory at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club, Vilas' fourth tournament triumph in four weeks, earned him $15,000. Vilas has won $281,000 in tournament competition this year.

The last time Vilas and Tanner played was in the Australian Open final and Tanner, blasting away on his favorite grass surface, won, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3. Vilas has now won 29 straight matches on clay with triumphs at the French Open, Kitzbuel, Austria and in the U.S. at Washington, D.C., Louisville and New Jersey.

Injured Steeler in critical condition

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Steelers' rookie wide receiver Dave Grinaker was reported in critical but stable condition at a hospital Monday with injuries received in a three-vehicle collision which killed another Steelers' rookie, tackle Randy Frisch.

Police said the accident occurred early Sunday as the players were returning in a car driven by Grinaker to the team's training camp at St. Vincent College in Latrobe, Pa., 50 miles east of here.

Funeral services for Frisch were scheduled for Wednesday in his hometown of Kirkwood, Mo.

Frisch, 23, who played college ball at Missouri, and Grinaker, 22, who played at Concordia, were in uniform for the Steelers' preseason game with the Buffalo Bills here Saturday night. Neither saw action in the game won by the Steelers 28-24.

The accident occurred at about 2:30 a.m. Sunday on U.S. 30 in North Huntingdon Twp., Westmoreland County, 20 miles east of here.

Gophers bypass player ineligibility

MINNEAPOLIS—C. Peter Magrath, University of Minnesota president, says the school won't declare three basketball players ineligible to get out of the NCAA-imposed probation placed on the men's athletic players.

The eligibility concerns Michael Thompson, a senior center and Big Ten scoring champion; senior forward David Winey, and Phillip Saunders, who graduated and now coaches at Golden Valley Lutheran College.

"It is my personal judgement that the university's Assembly Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics is correct in its determination that the three students are eligible to play and they are eligible in the Big Ten. I have no power to declare the students ineligible; that has to be done by the ACIA. And I have no intention of asking the ACIA to re-open the question of eligibility."

Marred course to be set for Classic

HARRISON, N.Y. — Despite vandalism that marred nine greens at the Westchester Country Club last week, the west course will be ready for the 11th Westchester Golf Classic, officials said Monday.

Vandals poured oil and white paint on the greens and painted swastikas on trees and greens late Thursday night or Friday. Other trees were burned with a kerosene-like substance.

John Traynor, superintendent of the courses, said greens damaged by the oil spill were being resodded from the nine-hole south course.

Sand City

Bring a wedge to Buffalo Grove

by JEFF NORDLUND

A reminder to golfers in the 28th annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Golf Tournament: bring your sand wedge.

This year's tourney will be played Sunday at Buffalo Grove Golf Club — and though not long, woody, nor dotted with lakes, it has 60 well-placed sand traps.

Those traps, some guarding drive-landing areas and others circling greens, will make or break the twilight league champion teams testing the par 72 layout in this year's annual meet.

CLUB PRO Carmel Molinaro knows about the sand and the other factors which come into play on the 6-year-old, 6,465-yard course.

"A good sand player has a definite advantage here," he said recently. "What we lack in trees, we make up for in traps.

"There are about 60 traps on the course, some of them added just this year. We've been working hardest on the tees, traps and greens.

"The greens here are probably the best you'll find on a daily fee course and though the course isn't particularly long, the traps make the golfers play each hole honest."

HERE IS A brief description of each hole and how Molinaro thinks it should be played:

No. 1 (390 yds., par 4) — The out-of-bounds along the right side make it necessary for the golfer to play down the fairway and not cut the dogleg right.

No. 2 (480 yds., par 5) — One of the course's easier holes. Traps guarding the green let only the longest of hitters reach the putting surface in two.

No. 3 (380 yds., par 4) — Fairly straight hole, and the golfer should stay left with his drive in order to avoid traps on the right.

No. 4 (200 yds., par 3) — this is one of the two toughest holes on the course. It's very long and is trapped on both the left and right sides of the green.

NO. 5 (520 yds., par 5) — This hole has a 90-degree dogleg right on the second shot, but a fairway bunker on the right of the drive landing area forces the golfer to stay left. A creek along the fairway's left side could come into play.

No. 6 (350 yds., par 4) — There's out-of-bounds along the entire left side of this hole, and two traps narrow the drive-landing area considerably.

No. 7 (370 yds., par 4) — Again, there's out-of-bounds along the left side. A fairway trap can be carried and the dogleg right cut by a long hitter.

No. 8 (150 yds., par 3) — The biggest problem here is the out-of-bounds on the left, although a large tree can catch shots which go too far right.

No. 9 (400 yds., par 4) — One of the best par 4s on the course. A large fairway bunker guards the bend in the dogleg left, forcing golfers to play the middle of the fairway.

NO. 10 (430 yds., par 4) — The best hole and one of the toughest you can find on any public course. Although it's straight, there's a creek along the entire left side and trees along most of the right. After a long, straight drive, the golfer must play another long, straight shot to the green, flanked by two traps.

No. 11 (375 yds., par 4) — Most golfers get to No. 11 and smile, since after No. 10, anything looks easy. The advice here is stay right. A creek and trees guard the left side of the fairway.

No. 12 (500 yds., par 5) — A creek crosses the fairway about 250 yards off tee, so most golfers can hit a full drive and still be short. The green is wide, but trapped.

No. 13 (360 yds., par 4) — Golfers can try to cut the trap at the bend of this dogleg right, but normally they'll have to play it straight. Traps along the right near the green further discourage cutting the dogleg.

NO. 14 (160 yds., par 3) — This is a relatively short par 3, but the wind is generally blowing against the golfer.

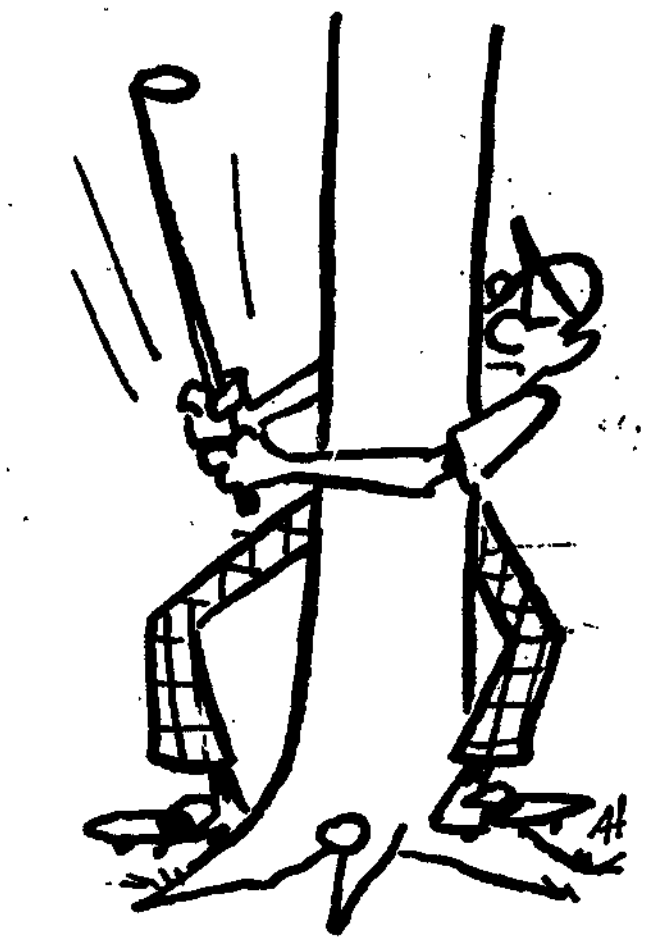

No. 15 (355 yds., par 4) — The out-of-bounds along the left causes many golfers to steer the ball right, but there is water there. Anything from a 3-wood to a 4-iron is used off the tee to make sure the ball lands in the driving area.

No. 16 (485 yds., par 5) — The golfer must stay to the right of this dogleg left, because the creek along the left side is out-of-bounds. Most golfers will have to lay up short of the creek which crosses the fairway in front of the green.

No. 17 (135 yds., par 3) — There is water on the left and bunkers on the right. Landing in a trap sets up the uneasy shot of having to hit with water just past the green.

NO. 18 (425 yds., par 4) — A trap and in-course out-of-bounds along the right of this dogleg might force the golfer to play straight down the middle, leaving a very long second shot. The large bunker along the right is very strategically placed.

Buffalo Grove Golf Course is located on Lake-Cook Rd., half a mile east of Arlington Heights Rd. in Buffalo Grove. The course has a driving range and practice putting green.

Hall lets 'Sunshine' in

for several days.

Looking as if he had just hit a home run, Ernest Banks seemed to float to the speaker's podium on the lawn next to the Hall of Fame museum. He sparkled in his sharp, blue suit and his eyes glinted and glowed.

"We got the setting, we got the sunshine, we got the fresh air and we got the team behind us," Banks said sweeping his arm around to take in the score of Hall of Famers on the podium with him.

"So let's go over to Doubleday Field and play two."

The roar from the crowd, stacked 20 and 30 deep along the make-shift fence, was as great as any ever heard in Cooperstown. Banks acknowledged the roar.

"I'M HAPPY to see the many thousands of Cub fans here today," he said, his smile widening to a boyish grin.

His wife and his twin sons and his daughter were on hand to share Ernie's joy. His mother and father, back home in Dallas, were not there to hear their 46-year-old son put everything into perspective.

"If it had not been for the people who believed in me, who helped me and encouraged me along the way, I would not be here today," Banks said. "My parents, my wife and my children, who gave me the love and the enthusiasm for baseball, and people like Monte Irvin, cool Papa Bell and Bob Kennedy.

"And the fans — that's you — who always gave me encouragement when I needed it," Banks added, much more than an afterthought.

ERNIE HESITATED for just a second, mentally searching for the right words for what he was about to say.

"There is one man I owe a great debt of gratitude," he said. "I respected and admired him since we first met in 1953. That's Philip K. Wrigley, one of the finest gentlemen I ever met in my life. My career and this honor certainly belong to Mr. Wrigley. I only wish he could have been here today."

Banks said a thank you and waved to the crowd, retreating to his seat amid applause. Bowie Kuhn wouldn't let him go, though.

"There's a sign over there that says something that needs to be said," the commissioner told Ernie.

The sign, held high by a young fan, read: America Loves Ernie Banks.

Mr. Cub smiled. The day was his.

JOYOUS ANTICIPATION. Ernie Banks (left) clutches the hands of Monty Irvin just prior to being inducted in baseball's Hall of Fame Monday. Irvin, who entered the shrine in 1973, welcomed Mr. Cub, only the eighth man to be elected in his first year of eligibility.

Hall of Famer Sewell warns against 'greed'

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — Joe Sewell offered stern advice Monday when the former great shortstop was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame.

Sewell, who starred for the Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees in the 1920s and 1930s, accepted his plaque from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in a colorful ceremony on the lawn adjoining the baseball shrine.

Also entering the Hall were Al Lopez, one of the outstanding managers of the 1950s and 1960s.

SEWELL, A PEPPERY 78, drew a laugh from the crowd when he said, "It's nice to be here today — in person . . . Thank you for electing me when I have a few faculties to express my appreciation.

"I am proud and grateful that I had the ability to play as long as I did," he added, his voice rising. "I would like to see the greed and the selfishness, that seems to me exists today, eliminated. Baseball is a great game and I hope we can keep it that way.

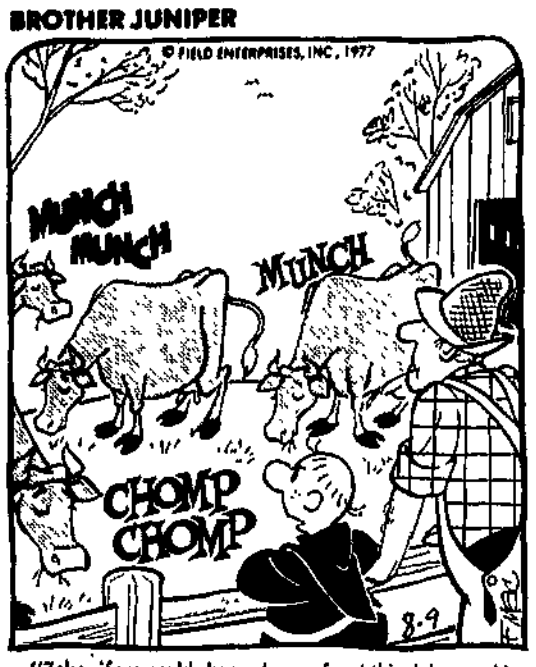

"I am taking three things with me from Cooperstown," he added. "A ring, which they gave me last night, this plaque and a lot of pleasant memories. I'll be back."

Al Lopez, who managed the Indians and Chicago White Sox for a total of 16 years in the 1950s and 1960s, called his induction "the greatest thing that ever happened to me" and added, "I had six managers during my career and all six of 'em are in the Hall of Fame . . . I guess I learned something from all of them."

Ask Andy

Intelligent little raccoon grows into angry adult

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Jerry Hendricks, 11, of Colorado Springs, Colo., for his question:

CAN YOU TELL ME ABOUT RACCOONS?

Friend raccoon has a bushy tail that features from five to seven rings of black and gray-brown and across his eyes he wears what appears to be a black mask. He's about three feet long as an adult and weighs between 15 and 25 pounds.

There are two main species: the northern raccoon who lives in Canada, the United States and Central America, and the crab-eating raccoon from South America.

Raccoons live in the woods and make dens in hollow logs, stumps or in trees. They are good swimmers and find much of their food in water: crabs, crayfish, frogs and fish. In addition, they eat acorns, birds' eggs, corn, fruit, nuts and occasionally grasshoppers and mice.

Have you heard the story about the way raccoons seem to wash their food before eating it? Scientists say the dunking of food into water is not an attempt by the animal to wash his food. Rather, he is imitating the way he would pull fish or other animals from rivers or streams. The dunking habit is more frequently seen among raccoons that are in captivity than those living in their natural environments.

Paws of the raccoon feature strong, sharp claws which are used in finding food and also to aid tree climbing. The paws are used in handling food almost as skillfully as those of monkeys.

Living in the woods, a raccoon will rarely leave a home range of 200 acres. He usually hunts for food at night and stays in his den during the day.

Raccoons mate between January and June, and after about nine weeks the mother will deliver three or four babies — although the number can range from one to seven. Face masks and tail rings are not standard equipment with the babies — these fancy markings develop later.

Mother raccoon is very protective and does not even let the father come near the babies. The eyes of the babies don't open until 20 days after birth.

Andy sends the book 200 Illustrated Science Experiments to Christine Weaver, 9, of San Diego, Calif., for her question:

WHAT CAUSES A HEADACHE?

More than 100 underlying problems could be responsible for the headache you receive. What actually happens is that there is an increased blood flow to the head with pressure within that irritates the pain receptors of the nervous system.

A headache is actually a cry that says "slow down." It is more than just a symptom.

Simple nervous tension is often the trigger that produces a headache. Sometimes it can be almost unbearable when other times it can be quite mild.

Migraine headaches are those usually caused by emotional tension that cause the arteries of the head, including those that reach the brain, to go into a spasm. As they draw together, they restrict the flow of blood and produce headache symptoms.

Don't worry too much about simple headaches. We all have them. But be sure to see your doctor if they persist.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Win at bridge

Stayman could save slam

Bidding methods have no defense against the so-called mirror distribution. This occurs when each partner has the same length in each of the four suits. It is particularly damaging when the mirror distribution is 4-3-3-3.

There is just no play at all for six no-trump in spite of the 34 high-card points held by North and South.

It is also worthy of note that players of the never-slip system might find their way to six hearts. There is a 4-4 heart fit.

In case you wonder what the never-slip system is it was described years ago by Ely Culbertson who said: "Show me all 52 cards and my system will get to the right contract every time."

Somewhere someone might try a Stayman response to the two-notrump opening to check for a 4-4 heart fit and then bid six hearts.

Playing at six hearts, South wins the club, cashes the ace and king of hearts and all the diamonds and spades. Then he cashes the second high club and throws East in with his queen of trumps.

East has to lead a diamond or a spade. South gets a ruff and discard and has avoided the loss of a club trick.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

MURPHY AND TOOMIN said they

Indictment studied in Dist. 59 probe

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

The Cook County State's Attorney's Office will decide next month whether a grand jury indictment will be sought in a case involving four Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 officials, Asst. State's Atty. Mitchell E. Garner said Monday.

Under investigation for alleged wrongdoing related to the formation of a unit school district are board of education members Judith Zanca and Emil Bahnmaier, Supt. Roger Bardwell and public relations director Leah Cummins, Garner said.

"We are in contact with several witnesses and will conclude our investigation in a month," he said.

Garner declined to reveal the names of the witnesses or the nature of their testimony, but said he will know next month whether there is "sufficient evidence of criminal activity" to warrant pursuit of a grand jury indictment.

THE STATE'S ATTORNEY'S investigation of the four Dist. 59 officials stems from charges made in May 1976 by board member Paul Kucharski.

In a 14-page statement issued last spring, Kucharski charged that the four misinformed the board and withheld information about the process of petitioning for the formation of a unit school district.

The four "made private deals, destroyed tapes and acted inappropriately as public officials," he said.

Reiterating her earlier denials of the charges, Mrs. Zanca Monday said Kucharski's allegations "are all falsehoods and lies and have no basis in truth."

SHE SAID she spoke to "a Mr. Turner" at the state's attorney's office Monday morning who told her he knew of no investigation involving her or any other Dist. 59 officials.

"He said if there was a case someone in the school district would know about it and no one does," Mrs. Zanca said. "He told me he'd probably have something in writing for me in a few days saying there is no investigation."

Garner said he knows of no Mr. Turner, but that as the assistant state's attorney handling the Dist. 59 investigation he knows there is an investigation.

"We have over 400 attorneys here and often the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing," he

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

Sox win, Cubs lose

Both the White Sox and Cubs were involved in ninth-inning decisions Monday night. The Sox were more fortunate, however, as Lamar Johnson's home run in the last inning provided a 5-4 victory over Seattle. In Pittsburgh, the Pirates scored twice in the ninth to beat the Cubs, 7-6.

Mr. Cub's legacy: let's play two

Byline report

Art Mugalian

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

BOBBY LIBIT, 626 Raupp Blvd., Buffalo Grove, today is an active 9-year-old who likes to play baseball and soccer with his dog. Two years ago, Bobby was given only three months to live.

'Incurable' illness didn't dim 9-year-old's spirit

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs. Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music.

"I DANCE, I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 18-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection.

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle.

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Resident won't pay taxes, his bill tripled last year

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said.

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said. He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year. Keeley's property has a higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said.

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said.

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

THE COMMITTEE also is calling for a freeze on Cook County assessments, a three-month extension on the Aug. 15 tax payment deadline and several other changes in tax assessment procedures.

"If more people get involved, we may be able to do something. I'm going to go right along with this group and not pay my taxes," Keeley said.

"You can't keep on taxing people — the sky can't be the limit," he said. "I'm about to retire, but I may have to work the rest of my life at these rates."

Homeowners form protest group

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans.

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p.m. at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jane Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere."

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D.C., is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes.

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings.

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills came out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else. I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills.

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said.

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council.

She said a arge-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases.

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said.

But for taxpayers such as Mrs. Spring, who are still concerned with their current tax bill, the idea of joining with other irate taxpayers is appealing.

"I'm so excited about it (Thursday's meeting) because everyone has been so frustrated since the bills came," she said.

said. "Mr. Turner can only speak from his own personal knowledge and he obviously isn't aware of what I'm doing."

Bahnmaier also said he knows of no investigation and denied the charges made against him by Kucharski.

BAHNAMIER AND Mrs. Zanca have repeatedly demanded a public apology from Kucharski for his charges, contending that he has no proof and there is no investigation under way.

Bardwell and Mrs. Cummins were unavailable for comment Monday.

"The fact that the state's attorney is looking into the situation is gratifying irrespective of what the outcome turns out to be," Kucharski said Monday. "It suggests I was not all wrong in bringing it to the public eye and asking that someone look into it and tell me if I'm right or wrong."

Kucharski said that from the beginning he has had serious concerns as to how the unit district movement was handled and the ethical roles played by certain individuals in getting the issue to a referendum in April.

BAHNMAIER, MRS. Zanca and Mrs. Cummins were members of the Committee of 10 Dist. 59 residents who filed the petition seeking formation of an Elk Grove Township unit school district.

Kucharski charged that the three district officials and Bardwell made a deal with representatives of Centex Industrial Park that involved promising a lower tax rate for the new district in exchamge for the business community's support of the unit district referendum.

Defeated by better than a 2-to-1 margin in a referendum last April, the unit district would have combined 21 Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one administration.

Owners charged on explosive count

Co-owners of a construction company that has worked on the Metropolitan Sanitary District's deep tunnel project were arrested Monday and charged with illegal possession and storage of explosives without a license.

Arrested were Anthony C. DeVito, 47, of 2018 Birch Ln., Park Ridge, and his brother Eugene, 53, of 1320 N. Hamlin Ave., Park Ridge, co-owners of Reliance Underground Construction Co.

The DeVitos were arrested a week after they called Cook County sheriff's police to dispose of several unstable explosives from their warehouse at 2300 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township. However, after checking records in the Illinois Dept. of Mines and Minerals, police learned later in the week the DeVitos did not have an explosives license.

COOK COUNTY Sheriff's detectives seized 29 sticks of dynamite and 93 electric blasting caps, and destroyed an additional 26 sticks of dynamite, investigators said.

"We've had this stuff (the explosives) for seven years and never thought anything about it," said Eugene DeVito after he and his brother were released Monday on $5,000 bond each. "We did what we thought was right when we called the police. We were unaware of a license."

Reliance Underground Construction Co. was awarded a contract to install more than 10,000 feet of sewer pipes in the Metropolitan Sanitary District's Deep Tunnel Project in Mount Prospect.

The project has required blasting but spokesmen for the James McHugh Construction Co., Chicago said Reliance has not supplied any of the dynamite used in the project and has done no blasting. McHugh is one of two general contractors hired by MSD for work on several drop shafts in the project.

"We haven't subcontracted any company for blasting purposes," said James LaRocque, a spokesman for McHugh. "We have supplied our own dynamite for the project — Reliance was only in charge of installing sewer lines."

The DeVitos are scheduled to appear at 1:30 p.m., Aug. 29 in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Dist. 59 to review $16.5 million budget

A tentative $16.5 million budget for the 1977-78 school year will be reviewed by the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 budget and finance committee at 8 p.m. today at Friendship Junior High School, 550 Elizabeth Ln., Des Plaines.

Mikva rips Raffe on unincorporated issue

U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10, Monday accused Maine Township Clerk Phillip Raffe and other Republican township officials of "playing politics" and dragging their feet in response to problems in the unincorporated section of the township.

The Evanston Democrat made his comments in response to recent accusations from Raffe that Mikva is playing politics by getting involved in township problems.

Mikva organized a task force last year to find solutions to the problems of crime and poor water quality in the unincorporated area.

Township officials set aside $8,000 last year to hire off-duty Cook County Sheriff's Police for additional police patrols but cut it out of the budget this year, calling it a low-priority item. Mikva has criticized the township for the move.

The unincorporated area is bounded generally by Dempster Street on the south, the Tri-State Tollway on the west, Central Road on the north, and Greenwood Avenue on the east. About 20,000 persons live in the area.

RAFFE SAID THE congressman created the task force as a public relations gimmick to help get himself reelected last fall. Mikva responded to the accusations at a press conference in his district office at the Des Plaines Civic Center, 1420 Miner St.

"I am sorry that Mr. Raffe has decided that his partisanship is more important than his responsibilities to the township," Mikva said.

"They (township officials) have dragged their feet in getting involved in the problem.

"The problems are real, they aren't made up," he said.

ASKED TO COMMENT on Mikva's statements, Raffe Monday said the problems Mikva is talking about are not the township's responsibility.

"They're accusing the township of being lax in areas we have no control over," Raffe said.

"It's a shame that a U.S. congressman doesn't know which agency is responsible for water, zoning, building and police protection," he said.

RAFFE SAID IT is Cook County's fault if service in these areas is poor.

"We provide the duties we're supposed to provide," he said.

Raffe said township officials have called a public meeting to "clear the air," and to let people know what agencies they should go to for answers to their problems. The township meeting is scheduled August 23 at Gemini School, 8955 Greenwood Rd.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "It wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

His bill triples, he won't pay taxes

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said.

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said. He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year. Keeley's property has a

Both the White Sox and Cubs were involved in ninth-inning decisions Monday night. The Sox were more fortunate, however, as Lamar Johnson's home run in the last inning provided a 5-4 victory over Seattle. In Pittsburgh, the Pirates scored twice in the ninth to beat the Cubs, 7-6.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

BOBBY LIBIT, 626 Raupp Blvd., Buffalo Grove, today is an active 9-year-old who likes to play baseball and soccer with his dog. Two years ago, Bobby was given only three months to live.

'Incurable' illness didn't dim 9-year-old's spirit

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music.

"I DANCE, I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 18-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection.

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle.

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Residents form taxpayers revolt to protest increases

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans.

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p.m. at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jane Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere."

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D.C., is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes.

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings.

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills came out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council

She said a arge-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said

Area resident won't pay taxes higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said.

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

THE COMMITTEE also is calling for a freeze on Cook County assessments, a three-month extension on the Aug. 15 tax payment deadline and several other changes in tax assessment procedures.

"If more people get involved, we may be able to do something I'm going to go right along with this group and not pay my taxes," Keeley said.

"You can't keep on taxing people — the sky can't be the limit," he said. "I'm about to retire, but I may have to work the rest of my life at these rates."

Village approves fees for law firm

A $32,000-a-year retainer fee with a Chicago law firm was narrowly approved Monday night by the Wheeling Village Board despite objections the agreement is "open ended."

The board voted 3 to 2 to approve the retainer agreement with the firm of Jann, Carroll, Kruse and Maher.

Under the contract the firm will receive $32,500 a year for services as village attorney and village prosecutor. The services include all trial-level cases as prosecutor and all regular advice, council and litigation as village attorney.

Trustees John Cole and Charles Kerr voted against the agreement, saying it does not provide a clear definition of what constituted "extraordinary services" or "complex litigation."

Under the agreement the firm would receive additional compensation for those two items as well as for "the appellate practices of the village prosecutor and village attorney."

KERR SAID, "The expression 'complex litigation' leaves it completely wide open. It's like an open ended contract."

Cole also questioned the definition of complex litigation.

"My big hangup is I don't think the term has been appropriately defined. Almost anything could be complex litigation and subject to additional compensation," he said.

Cole also questioned why the $2,708 monthly retainer fee must be paid in advance.

Alan Garfield, the attorney handling the legal work for the village, said the retainer agreement was "fairly standard."

"WE'RE BEING retained, not employed. We're normally paid at the beginning of the month," he said.

Garfield said a detailed definition of complex litigation was left out "to keep the agreement as brief as possible."

Extraordinary services have to be mutually agreed upon. We aren't charging for litigation as the past attorney had, he said.

Garfield said complex litigation would include matters beyond "the normal day-to-day operations."

The law firm was hired July 5 to replace former village Attorney John Burke and former village prosecutor John Clarke. Burke received a salary of $21,000 a year and $35 an hour for litigation. In 1976 Burke made an additional $21,000 in litigation fees because of the large number of lawsuits involving the village. Clarke received a salary of $7,500.

Trustees who approved the agreement are Dolores Dahm, Robert Ross and Roger Powers.

Residents await creek improvements

by DEBBE JONAK

McDonald Creek lies low and quiet in Prospect Heights. But that does not comfort residents living along the banks of the moody stream.

Spared in the last few years by sparse rainfall, they stand ready for the floodwaters to return at any time — ready in virtual fortresses tightly sealed and armed with sump pumps.

Improvements have been made to McDonald Creek to prevent flooding problems. But they believe more should be made. They feel most of the improvements — culverts, widening of the creek bed — have improved conditions for Mount Prospect residents downstream.

The reseidents support a plan that calls for constructing a creek bypass northwest of the city in which floodwater would flow during heavy rains.

BUT THE PROJECT is still in the planning stage, and until it is finished, residents can only wait and plug the cracks in their homes.

A few neighbors recently sat in the kitchen of Angelo and Joan Paul, 1007 Wildwood Dr., recalling the "Great Flood of 1972" and recounting progress in solving the problem since then.

On Aug. 22, 1972, there was water in the kitchen, water slowly creeping up the first step of the staircase to the second floor.

It was the worst of eight floods in a monsoon-like summer.

She and her husband and family had moved into the house just a couple of weeks earlier. Many of their belongings — including irreplaceable wedding photos and baby pictures — were still in boxes in the basement.

THE FLOOD SAVED them the bother of unpacking."

Mrs. Paul sat on the third step with her children watching the water approach and singing.

"So my daughters wouldn't get hysterical, I sang, 'Water stay away from my door.' But I'm thinking to my self, "God, how close are you going to let it get?' " she said.

After the floodwaters receded — about six hours later — it was time for reckoning.

"We had to talk it over and decide, Are we gonna stay or are we gonna leave?" she said.

THEY DECIDED TO stick it out and fight, beginning the long and costly process of waterproofing their house.

So did Harold and Gloria Kargenian.

When they moved into their home at 1012 W. Wildwood Dr., they had not heard about the flooding problem. But Kargenian suspected something when he found mud on the ceiling rafters in the basement.

His suspicions soon were verified with a water-filled basement and the Kargenians have spent the last seven years flood-proofing their house, too.

"HERE YOU GET A new house and anticipate decorating, but you spend your first few years getting pumps and caulking," Mrs.Kargenian said.

In 1972, they spent $12,787 repairing damage from the flood—$9,197 of that happened during the Aug. 22 overflow.

They and the Pauls have spent thousands of dollars each on preventive measures. Kargenian, chairman of the city's plan commission and the North Cook County Soil Conservation District, has installed seven sump pumps and one standby system. The main pumps can handle 24,000 gallons of water an hour. A gas generator will keep the pumps running if electricity fails.

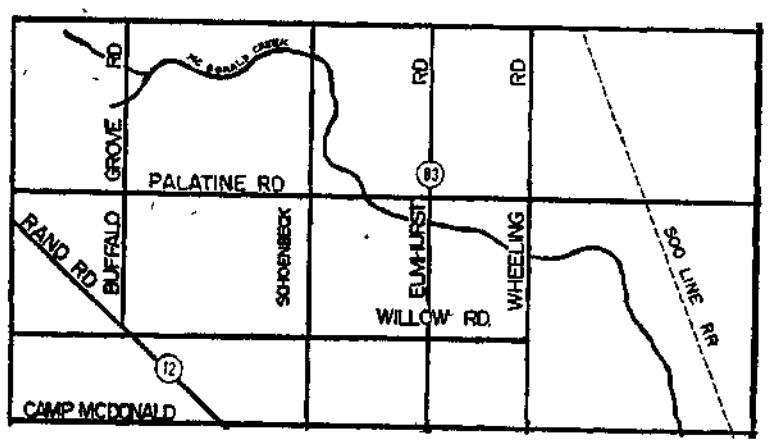

Since the last flood in 1973, plans and programs have been initiated to alleviate the problem, which is caused by the narrowness of the creek, poorly designed bridges which act as dams and debris in the stream.

Among the areas hit hardest by flooding was the Wildwood Drive neighborhood to the north, along Patricia Lane and on Edwards Street to the south.

THE SOO-LINE culvert, which runs under the railroad tracks near Wolf and Kensington roads, was enlarged in 1975 to help speed the flow of water during heavy rains.

McDonald Creek winds through Mount Prospect and empties into the Des Plaines River. Although the new culvert was called a godsend by some, many contend it will substantially improve the flooding situation only for those downstream in Mount Prospect.

So residents upstream are setting their sights on the Des Plaines Floodwater Management Plan.

FLOODING ALONG McDonald Creek n Prospect Heights has forced some residents to protect their homes against high water. They want creek improvements that will keep their homes high and dry.

The plan is a joint project of the Metropolitan Sanitary District, U.S. Soil Conservation Service and the Illinois Division of Water Resources.

IT CALLS FOR a by-pass northwest of Prospect Heights to contain floodwater during heavy rains. Stonegage Drive would dead-end just west of Wildwood Drive because a bridge there would be removed to allow freer flow of the water. The creek would be widened in key spots.

"It would solve the flood problem," Roger Olson, project director, said. However, he added it will take at least three to five years to complete paperwork, planning and secure approval from Washington.

Until then, Prospect Heights can only hope for a few more dry seasons, he said, offering little hope himself — "It'll rain again, don't worry."

So neighbors of the creek are arming themselves for the next battle and trying to lessen the problem by keeping the creek clean. They pull weeds, trees, chairs and other debris out of the stream on a regular basis.

"We're going to lick it together," Paul said. "You know, we're one big family here because of the flooding — you'll find no better friends."

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

$20,000 for move of youth center OKd

Buffalo Grove will spend up to $20,000 to move a building for use as a village youth center.

In a reversal of an earlier decision, the village board Monday voted 3-2 in favor of the expenditure after receiving petitions signed by 870 village residents favoring the move.

Trustees Robert Bogart, John Marienthal, and Howard Mendenhall voted for the expenditure. Trustees Howard Keister and Stephen Stone voted against the proposal saying it poses too many unanswered questions.

The village does not know if $20,000 will be enough to move a 4,500-square-foot facility nor where it would put the building, Village Mgr. William Balling said.

Nor does the village have the $20,000 available in this year's budget, Balling said.

MARIENTHAL SUGGESTED three alternatives for raising the necessary funds. The village could ask each family in town to donate $5 to the center, it could take out a $20,000 loan, or it could enact a special utility tax to obtain the needed funds, Marienthal said.

The village board made no decision on financing the moving of the building, a model unit from Cambridge on the Lake, Dundee Road east of Buffalo Grove Road.

Leisure Technology Inc., Skokie, the developer of Cambridge on the Lake, has offered its building free of charge to the village if it could be moved in the next 40 days.

Keister said he objected to the expense because the committee of Jaycees and village residents which had been working on plans to establish a youth center had not proposed any programs for the building once it is moved. The committee circulated the petitions presented Monday night.

"Let's talk about the programs. I'd like to hear some specifics before this village moves what could be a white elephant," Keister said.

"PROGRAMS HAVE TO be developed by a professional staff. There is not anybody in this room that has the capability to develop a program that will be workable," said Bogart, who has been the trustee most recently involved with the study of a youth center in the village.

Several trustees said the youth center was the type of facility that should be run by the park district, not the village.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

BOBBY LIBIT, 626 Raupp Blvd., Buffalo Grove, today is an active 9-year-old who likes to play baseball and soccer with his dog. Two years ago, Bobby was given only three months to live.

'Incurable' illness didn't dim 9-year-old's spirit

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs. Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music

"I DANCE, I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 18-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle.

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Resident won't pay taxes, his bill tripled last year

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said.

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said, He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year. Keeley's property has a higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said.

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

THE COMMITTEE also is calling for a freeze on Cook County assessments, a three-month extension on the Aug. 15 tax payment deadline and several other changes in tax assessment procedures.

"If more people get involved, we may be able to do something. I'm going to go right along with this group and not pay my taxes," Keeley said.

"You can't keep on taxing people — the sky can't be the limit," he said. "I'm about to retire, but I may have to work the rest of my life at these rates."

Homeowners form protest group

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans.

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p.m. at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jane Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere."

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D.C., is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes.

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings.

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills came out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else. I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills.

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said.

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council.

She said a large-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases.

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said.

But for taxpayers such as Mrs. Spring, who are still concerned with their current tax bill, the idea of joining with other irate taxpayers is appealing.

"I'm so excited about it (Thursday's meeting) because everyone has been so frustrated since the bills came," she said.

Report expected soon on fetuses

A pathologist's report on 20 fetuses and babies confiscated two weeks ago by the Lake County coroner at the Lake County Fair is expected later this week.

Coroner Robert Babcox said Monday the report should tell how long the fetuses and babless had been preserved in formaldehyde. They were confiscated July 30 after being displayed as part of a sideshow at the county fair near Graystake.

Chris Michael Christ, 29, of Florida, appeared in Lake County Circuit Court Friday and was given permission to leave the state before his court arraignment next Monday. He is free on $2,000 bond.

Christ is charged with violations of the Illinois Coroner's Act, including displaying bodies for profit and transporting bodies without death certificates or disposition papers.

Babcox said Monday that Christ insists the fetuses were obtained from other carnival operators who went out of business. Five of the jars that contained fetuses were obtained in 1970 and the other 15 in 1972, Babcox said Christ told him.

Christ also contended he did not know they were human bodies, although he did change the formaldehyde in the jars periodically, Babcox said.

Owners charged on explosive count

Co-owners of a construction company that has worked on the Metropolitan Sanitary District's deep tunnel project were arrested Monday and charged with illegal possession and storage of explosives without a license.

Arrested were Anthony C. DeVito, 47, of 2018 Birch Ln., Park Ridge, and his brother Eugene, 53, of 1320 N. Hamlin Ave., Park Ridge, co-owners of Reliance Underground Construction Co.

The DeVitos were arrested a week after they called Cook County sheriff's police to dispose of several unstable xplosives from their warehouse at 2500 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township. However, after checking records in the Illinois Dept. of Mines and Minerals, police learned later in the week the DeVitos did not have an explosives license.

COOK COUNTY Sheriff's detectives seized 29 sticks of dynamite and 93 electric blasting caps, and destroyed an additional 26 sticks of dynamite, investigators said.

"We've had this stuff (the explosives) for seven years and never thought anything about it," said Eugene DeVito after he and his brother were released Monday on $5,000 bond each. "We did what we thought was right when we called the police. We were unaware of a license."

Reliance Underground Construction Co. was awarded a contract to install more than 10,000 feet of sewer pipes in the Metropolitan Sanitary District's Deep Tunnel Project in Mount Prospect

The project has required blasting but spokesmen for the James McHugh Construction Co., Chicago said Reliance has not supplied any of the dynamite used in the project and has done no blasting. McHugh is one of two general contractors hired by MSD for work on several drop shafts in the project.

"We haven't subcontracted any company for blasting purposes," said James LaRocque, a spokesman for McHugh. "We have supplied our own dynamite for the project — Reliance was only in charge of installing sewer lines."

The DeVitos are scheduled to appear at 1:30 p.m., Aug. 29 in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Mount Prospect may join SHARE plan

A plan to obtain Lake Michigan water from the City of Evanston has been rejected by Mount Prospect Mayor Carolyn H. Krause because of the cost and the distance it would involve.

Mrs. Krause will discuss her decision with officials from Arlington Heights and Palatine, who still are considering buying lake water from the North Shore community.

Mrs. Krause has recommended the Mount Prospect Village Board abandon the DAMP water commission's proposal to purchase water from Evanston in favor of the SHARE+3 plan to obtain lake water from Chicago through a reservoir and pumping station to be built at O'Hare Airport.

THE DAMP commission was created by the Illinois Legislature in 1957 and SHARE+3 was organized in 1975. Both groups were formed to obtain and distribute Northwest suburban allocations of lake water.

"I believe the time has come to choose between the two plans," Mrs. Krause said. "We cannot support both in view of our limited water funds. I personally favor SHARE for several reasons."

The mayor said the village's proximity to the airport would mean the cost of acquiring water through the O'Hare pipeline would be less than if it was purchased directly from Evanston. Mount Prospect is about eight miles from O'Hare, less than half the distance from the village to Evanston's shoreline.

The pipeline to O'Hare is estimated to cost $44 million to $62 million. The pipeline to Evanston would cost substantially more, but no estimates are available. Supporters of the Evanston line, however, say it will cost less in the long run because Evanston would sell water cheaper than Chicago.

Another reason Mrs. Krause said she supports the SHARE+3 plan is there are more municipalities with a greater combined population involved. "We could spread it (the cost) around more," she said.

DAMP CURRENTLY has three active member towns: Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine.

SHARE+3 consists of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove, Palatine, Mount Prospect and Buffalo Grove.

In addition to the lower cost of water, Mrs. Krause said Mount Prospect's expenes for engineering and feasibility studies are less with SHARE than with DAMP, also because there are more participants in SHARE.

The village board is expected to pass a resolution Aug. 16 which supports the SHARE plan and allocates $10,000 for legal, engineering and related costs for one year.

The SHARE+3 towns will meet Aug. 17 to discuss legal counsel for the organzation and to establish a one-year budget and financial plan.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

Indictment studied in Dist. 59 probe

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

The Cook County State's Attorney's Office will decide next month whether a grand jury indictment will be sought in a case involving four Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 officials, Asst. State's Atty. Mitchell E. Garner said Monday.

Under investigation for alleged wrongdoing related to the formation of a unit school district are board of education members Judith Zanca and Emil Bahnmaier, Supt. Roger Bardwell and public relations director Leah Cummins, Garner said.

"We are in contact with several witnesses and will conclude our investigation in a month," he said.

Garner declined to reveal the names of the witnesses or the nature of their testimony, but said he will know next month whether there is "sufficient evidence of criminal activity" to warrant pursuit of a grand jury indictment.

THE STATE'S ATTORNEY'S investigation of the four Dist. 59 officials stems from charges made in May 1976 by board member Paul Kucharski.

In a 14-page statement issued last spring, Kucharski charged that the four misinformed the board and withheld information about the process of petitioning for the formation of a unit school district.

The four "made private deals, destroyed tapes and acted inappropriately as public officials," he said.

Reiterating her earlier denials of the charges, Mrs. Zanca Monday said Kucharski's allegations "are all falsehoods and lies and have no basis in truth."

SHE SAID she spoke to "a Mr. Turner" at the state's attorney's office Monday morning who told her he knew of no investigation involving her or any other Dist. 59 officials.

"He said if there was a case someone in the school district would know about it and no one does," Mrs. Zanca said. "He told me he'd probably have something in writing for me in a few days saying there is no investigation."

Garner said he knows of no Mr. Turner, but that as the assistant state's attorney handling the Dist. 59 investigation he knows there is an investigation.

"We have over 400 attorneys here and often the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing," he

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic lacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs. Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music.

"I DANCE. I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 18-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection.

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Resident won't pay taxes, his bill tripled last year

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said.

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said. He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year. Keeley's property has a higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said.

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

THE COMMITTEE also is calling for a freeze on Cook County assessments, a three-month extension on the Aug 15 tax payment deadline and several other changes in tax assessment procedures.

"If more people get involved, we may be able to do something. I'm going to go right along with this group and not pay my taxes," Keeley said.

"You can't keep on taxing people — the sky can't be the limit," he said. "I'm about to retire, but I may have to work the rest of my life at these rates."

Homeowners form protest group

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p m. at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jane Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere "

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D C , is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings.

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills came out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else. I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills.

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said.

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council.

She said a arge-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases.

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said

Lost grave stones sadden official

by RUTH MUGALIAN

When the City of Rolling Meadows plowed through the Old Plum Grove Cemetery with a bulldozer two years ago, Averry Wolfrum, township cemetery trustee, was willing to consider it an unfortunate accident.

But when it happened again last week, Wolfrum was not so generous.

He called the damage "open defiance of what I was trying to do."

WOLFRUM IS trying to preserve what little is left of the pioneer cemetery, near the Meadow Edge subdivision, dating back to the 1800s. Most of the grave markers have been stolen or vandalized. What was left of them were plowed up two years ago by bulldozers digging a sewer for the Meadow Edge development on the southwest side of town.

But Wolfrum said he believed the stumps of those graves still were there until the city plowed them up last week while drilling a new well. He is storing the broken markers and had planned to restore them after the well was dug and a fence was built to keep out thieves and vandals.

The well site is just north of an old Cook County cemetery. But about two years ago Wolfrum discovered a strip of graves extending into the city limits and onto the well site. He had asked the city to avoid that strip when they drilled the well and they "agreed in principle" to do so, he said.

"We worked out a deal a couple of months ago where they wouldn't dig near the fence," Wolfrum said. (Assistant City Mgr. Charles Green assured me they would keep me informed."

BUT WOLFRUM said he discovered work on the well had begun, when he drove by the site last week and noticed the rig set up.

"My heart just fell," he said. "The bulldozer had dug a lagoon just about to the fence line where I reserved for the graves.

"I came on the scene and there was Green and (Public Works Director John) Hennessy and they looked a little surprised to see me."

Wolfrum said officials showed him three fragments of markers the bulldozeer had dug up.

"WHAT THEY did was tell me how careful they were being as they desecrated the cemetery," he said. "It's just like what happened two years ago with the sewer except that could have been a mistake. But this time I've repeatedly gone to meetings and they just went ahead and did as they pleased."

Wolfrum was especially angry with Hennessy, whom he claimed had fought Wolfrum's request for a 25-foot wide road into the cemetery. Wolfrum said he needed the road to do his restoration work.

"Hennessy was the one all along who frantically demanded to keep it narrow or not allow it at all. He had every intention of violating the cemetery if it suited his convenience "

Hennessy acknowledged that he did not want to allow the road, but he said the damage was accidental and the city had done everything possible to avoid it.

HE SAID HE and two other public works employes went to the well site the day drilling began to show workers what to avoid. He said they were told to stay 25 feet from the fence.

Later, when he discovered the markers had been disturbed, he stopped work and called Wolfrum's office.

"It was just an oversight of the bulldozer operator, I suppose," Hennessy said

When Wolfrum asked the city to allow him a road, Hennessy said he told him he could use the city road to the well for his work.

HENNESSY SAID he feels "very bad about the whole thing," but he said Wolfrum should have staked off the area he wanted the workers to avoid.

"I've told him I'll be happy to put a man with him if he wants to stake it out or help him with anything he wants to do," Hennessy said.

Green also said the damage was a mistake and that "we called Mr. Wolfrum and all work stopped.

"If he checked with Cook County we had calls in for him as soon as we realized it. We were very concerned," he said.

Owners charged on explosive count

Co-owners of a construction company that has worked on the Metropolitan Sanitary District's deep tunnel project were arrested Monday and charged with illegal possession and storage of explosives without a license.

Arrested were Anthony C. DeVito, 47, of 2018 Birch Ln., Park Ridge, and his brother Eugene, 53, of 1320 N. Hamlin Ave , Park Ridge, co-owners of Reliance Underground Construction Co.

The DeVitos were arrested a week after they called Cook County sheriff's police to dispose of several unstable explosives from their warehouse at 2500 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township. However, after checking records in the Illinois Dept. of Mines and Minerals, police learned later in the week the DeVitos did not have an explosives license

COOK COUNTY Sheriff's detectives seized 29 sticks of dynamite and 93 electric blasting caps, and destroyed an additional 26 sticks of dynamite, investigators said.

"We've had this stuff (the explosives) for seven years and never thought anything about it," said Eugene DeVito after he and his brother were released Monday on $5,000 bond each. "We did what we thought was right when we called the police. We were unaware of a license."

Reliance Underground Construction Co was awarded a contract to install more than 10,000 feet of sewer pipes in the Metropolitan Sanitary District's Deep Tunnel Project in Mount Prospect.

The project has required blasting but spokesmen for the James McHugh Construction Co., Chicago said Reliance has not supplied any of the dynamite used in the project and has done no blasting. McHugh is one of two general contractors hired by MSD for work on several drop shafts in the project

"We haven't subcontracted any company for blasting purposes," said James LaRocque, a spokesman for McHugh. "We have supplied our own dynamite for the project — Reliance was only in charge of installing sewer lines "

The DeVitos are scheduled to appear at 1:30 p.m., Aug. 29 in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

said. "Mr. Turner can only speak from his own personal knowledge and he obviously isn't aware of what I'm doing."

Bahnmaier also said he knows of no investigation and denied the charges made against him by Kucharski.

BAHNAMIER AND Mrs. Zanca have repeatedly demanded a public apology from Kucharski for his charges, contending that he has no proof and there is no investigation under way.

Bardwell and Mrs. Cummins were unavailable for comment Monday.

"The fact that the state's attorney is looking into the situation is grafifying irrespective of what the outcome turns out to be," Kucharski said Monday. "It suggests I was not all wrong in bringing it to the public eye and asking that someone look into it and tell me if I'm right or wrong."

Kucharski said that from the beginning he has had serious concerns as to how the unit district movement was handled and the ethical roles played by certain individuals in getting the issue to a referendum in April.

BAHNMAIER, MRS. Zanca and Mrs. Cummins were members of the Committee of 10 Dist. 59 residents who filed the petition seeking formation of an Elk Grove Township unit school district.

Kucharski charged that the three district officials and Bardwell made a deal with representatives of Centex Industrial Park that involved promising a lower tax rate for the new district in exchange for the business community's support of the unit district referendum.

Defeated by better than a 2-to-1 margin in a referendum last April, the unit district would have combined 21 Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one administration.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

MURPHY AND TOOMIN said they

Dist. 54 chief gets 6.2% pay increase

Supt. Wayne Schaible was given a relatively conservative 6.2 per cent salary increase by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

The board last week awarded hefty raises to other district personnel to bring them up to private industry salary levels.

Schaible, who is beginning his 11th year as superintendent, will get a $2,500 increase in 1977-78, from $40,000 to $42,500.

Other central administrators got raises as high as 11 per cent while principals' raises averaged 10.9 per cent. Twelve-month secretaries received 30 per cent increases, the largest increase, followed by a 22.3 per cent raise for library clerks and 18.6 per cent for 10-month secretaries.

WITH THE AVERAGE 30 per cent raise, the majority of the 12-month secretaries will make between $8,500 and $9,700, although a small number who have been employed by the district for a long time will make as much as $14,625.

Salaries for 10-month secretaries range from about $5,000 to $9,050 depending on experience. With a 22 per cent increase, library clerks will make between $3.15 and $5.95 an hour depending on experience.

The district's five psychologists will receive an 11.4 per cent increase and will be paid between $15,145 and $22,345. Consultants receiving a 10.8 per cent raise will make between $21,000 and $25,700.

Besides his salary, Schaible gets a new car every two to three years. Other top administrators receiving increases are: Milton Derr, associate superintendent, $34,950, an increase of 6 per cent; Ronald Ruble, assistant superintendent for personnel, $34,000, a 10.2 per cent increase; James Briggs, assistant superintendent for special services, $32,500, an 8.9 per

Sox win, Cubs lose

Both the White Sox and Cubs were involved in ninth-inning decisions Monday night. The Sox were more fortunate, however, as Lamar Johnson's home run in the last inning provided a 5-4 victory over Seattle. In Pittsburgh, the Pirates scored twice in the ninth to beat the Cubs, 7-6.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom.

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs. Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music.

"I DANCE, I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 18-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection.

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle.

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Child burglars 'amaze' officials

by JOHN LAMPINEN

One boy was 8; the other was 9.

"That's very young," says Lt. James Dillon of the Schaumburg Police Dept. "They're still chewing bubble gum at 8 and 9."

Apparently, they were old enough to commit burglary.

THE TWO youths, one from Schaumburg and one from Hanover Park, were arrested Saturday night after allegedly breaking into a house in Schaumburg in quest of some clocks and some other small household furniture.

Here is how police and witnesses recount the incident:

The house at 1514 Revere Circle had been unoccupied for about two weeks. The current owners had moved out at that time, but some belongings were left behind.

Andy Guagenti, who lives across the street at 1508 Revere Circle, is a school teacher, but he is also getting into the real estate business, and he was to close the sale of the house.

But Aug. 1, someone lifted a patio door off its track and burglarized the house, taking some beer and a few other small items.

SO GUAGENTI asked Santo Cerami, who lives next door to the house at 1516 Revere Circle, to keep an eye on it.

Saturday, a little after 6 p.m., a couple of neighborhood children, also 8 and 9, saw two boys put a ladder up to the second floor window of the house, use a bar to force the window open and climb in.

The young witnesses ran around to Cerami's front door and told Mrs. Cerami what they saw. She hurried across the street to Guagenti's home.

"Andy, there's someone in the building," she said.

"How do you know?"

"There's a ladder up to the window."

GUAGENTI DIRECTED his wife to phone police and started to head across the street. Meanwhile, Cerami had entered the house, and as Guagenti came over, Cerami came out of the house with the two boys.

The inside of the home had been ransacked, but it was difficult to determine how much of the vandalism had been committed earlier and how much they committed.

Guagenti stood them against a wall in his living room until police arrived. They were silent. They were not belligerent, but neither were they apologetic.

"I can't believe it," Guagenti said. "Being a school teacher, I was amazed at the change in children's attitudes over the years. They appeared surprised that there was anything wrong with what they were doing."

Police arrived and arrested the boys, and they were turned over to juvenile authorities. Dillon said police often find teen-agers involved in burglaries, but seldom has he heard of burglars who are so young.

Guagenti was equally amazed.

"I just can't believe it, kids that age."

For medical center or schools?

Dist. 54, village battle over funds from builder

by HOLLY HANSON

There is $42,500 gathering dust in a Schaumburg bank, and Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and the Village of Schaumburg are determined to keep each other from getting it.

Dist. 54 wants the money to educate children.

The village wants it to build a medical center.

"NO WAY THEY (Dist. 54) will get the hospital money," Village Pres. Raymond Kessell said. "Sometime way in the future, there will be a need for a hospital here."

AT THIS POINT, the village seems to have the upper hand. The money was donated by the developer of the Dunbar Lakes property, north of Schaumburg Road and west of Plum Grove Road in Schaumburg, for a planned Schaumburg hospital that never materialized. The money is now in escrow in a village bank account.

Dist. 54 officials however argue they need the $42,500 to provide an education for the several hundred children the Dunbar Lakes development will bring to the district.

Eventually, Dist. 54 will receive tax money for that purpose. But the sate's tax collection lag means the district will have to pay for the children's schooling for at least 18 months before any tax money arrives to help foot the bill. Land for a school site or $100 per residential unit have been standard donations from developers throughout the district, Dist. 54 officials said.

FOUR YEARS ago, when the Dunbar firm sought zoning for the property, it agreed to donate $100 per residential unit to be used to build a hospital in Schaumburg.

The hospital, scheduled to be a northern branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, Chicago was scrapped because costs had doubled from the original $12 million estimate.

Two years ago, most village developers who had made donations to the village's hospital account, including Dunbar, agreed to have them transferred to one set up to pay for a future medical facility, which village officials insisted would be needed someday.

The Dunbar firm eventually developed about 25 per cent of the property, Dist. 54 Controller Victor Berner said, but the homes did not sell well and the firm went bankrupt.

LAST WEEK, the area's new developers, Graycon Corp., Chicago, asked the Schaumburg Zoning Board of Appeals to change the area's zoning from high-rise apartments to multi-family townhouses Graycon wants to build 338 townhouse units on about 29 acres, Berner said.

The firm offered the village $100 per unit for the medical building and $100 per unit for a proposed cultural center for Schaumburg, Berner said.

The firm did not pledge any type of donation to Dist. 54, Board of Education Pres. Elizabeth Carpenter said.

THE BOARD has sent a letter to the Graycon firm to request several items, she said, including a $100 donation to Dist. 54 for each residential unit and a whole or partial school site. The district also wants the $42,500 already in escrow, Mrs. Carpenter said, and has asked to be notified of the results of future zoning board meetings.

If zoning for the Graycon development is approved, Berner said children from the area would attend Schaumburg School, 520 E Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg.

Dist. 54 officials said their request for the builder donation is justified because the district's schools were ignored in the first phase of the Dunbar development.

"There's a principle involved," Mrs. Carpenter said. "Builders have an obligation to the community."

Lost grave stones sadden official

by RUTH MUGALIAN

When the City of Rolling Meadows plowed through the Old Plum Grove Cemetery with a bulldozer two years ago, Averry Wolfrum, township cemetery trustee, was willing to consider it an unfortunate accident.

But when it happened again last week, Wolfrum was not so generous.

He called the damage "open defiance of what I was trying to do."

WOLFRUM IS trying to preserve what little is left of the pioneer cemetery, near the Meadow Edge subdivision, dating back to the 1800s. Most of the grave markers have been stolen or vandalized. What was left of them were plowed up two years ago by bulldozers digging a sewer for the Meadow Edge development on the southwest side of town.

But Wolfrum said he believed the stumps of those graves still were there until the city plowed them up last week while drilling a new well. He is storing the broken markers and had planned to restore them after the well was dug and a fence was built to keep out thieves and vandals.

The well site is just north of an old Cook County cemetery. But about two years ago Wolfrum discovered a strip of graves extending into the city limits and onto the well site. He had asked the city to avoid that strip when they drilled the well and they "agreed in principle" to do so, he said.

"We worked out a deal a couple of months ago where they wouldn't dig near the fence," Wolfrum said. (Assistant City Mgr. Charles Green assured me they would keep me informed."

BUT WOLFRUM said he discovered work on the well had begun, when he drove by the site last week and noticed the rig set up

"My heart just fell," he said. "The bulldozer had dug a lagoon just about to the fence line where I reserved for the graves.

"I came on the scene and there was Green and (Public Works Director John) Hennessy and they looked a little surprised to see me."

Wolfrum said officials showed him three fragments of markers the bulldozeer had dug up

"WHAT THEY did was tell me how careful they were being as they desecrated the cemetery," he said. "It's just like what happened two years ago with the sewer except that could have been a mistake. But this time I've repeatedly gone to meetings and they just went ahead and did as they pleased."

Wolfrum was especially angry with Hennessy, whom he claimed had fought Wolfrum's request for a 25-foot wide road into the cemetery. Wolfrum said he needed the road to do his restoration work

"Hennessy was the one all along who frantically demanded to keep it narrow or not allow it at all. He had every intention of violating the cemetery if it suited his convenience."

Hennessy acknowledged that he did not want to allow the road, but he said the damage was accidental and the city had done everything possible to avoid it

HE SAID HE and two other public works employes went to the well site the day drilling began to show workers what to avoid. He said they were told to stay 25 feet from the fence.

Later, when he discovered the markers had been disturbed, he stopped work and called Wolfrum's office.

"It was just an oversight of the bulldozer operator, I suppose," Hennessy said.

When Wolfrum asked the city to allow him a road, Hennessy said he told him he could use the city road to the well for his work.

Suspect arson in $5,000 fire at CB store

Arson is suspected in an early morning fire which swept through a Citizens' Band radio store in Schaumburg Monday, causing more than $5,000 damage to the store's merchandise and interior.

The fire raged for about 15 minutes after 6:30 a.m. at the Frequency Counter, 31 E. Golf Rd., police said. The store's picture window had been broken and two bottles containing small amounts of flammable liquid were found on the floor, police said.

The bottles probably were thrown through the window and exploded at impact, police said.

Police said Monday they had no suspects.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just thing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

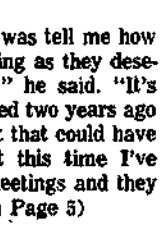

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1968s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senior who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . . they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

'Incurable' illness didn't dim 9-year-old's spirit

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest, of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

No arrests in beatings with no ID

Rolling Meadows police Monday said they cannot make an arrest in the recent child beetings at the Whispering Glen Apartment complex because the two victims have been unable to make a positive identication of the four suspects.

But the mother of the first victim insists her daughter has identified her assailant.

Phyllis Morrow, whose 3-year-old daughter, Tammy, was beaten in the basement of the building at 4718 Arbor Dr., July 13 said, "Tammy has been shown three pictures of three different boys since she got out of the hospital two weeks ago.

"She's reacted very oddly to one of the pictures," Mrs. Morrow said. "As far as I'm concerned, that's a positive identification."

POLICE HAVE questioned four youths ages 10 to 12 in connection with the beatings. All of the youths live in the complex.

Police say an arrest may not be made because they said the victims are too young to give a credible identification.

Mrs. Morrow said police haven't given her any indication that Tammy's identification has strengthened their case.

"They (police) keep saying they're running into a brick wall," Mrs. Morrow said. "They say she's too young to give a positive identification, and that because she was attacked by a black boy she'll probably react the same way to all black boys.

"But I think they're not looking at all the facts," she said. "Tammy has told me over and over that she's sure of the kid that attacked her. I'm frustrated."

Centre school signup open

Centre For Life, an alternative primary school in Palatine, is accepting registrations for the 1977-78 school year.

The school, 572 W. Hellen Rd., accepts children ages 4 to 9 (preschool through third grade). Classes begin Sept. 7 and children attend from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day. Interested parents may call 359-6935.

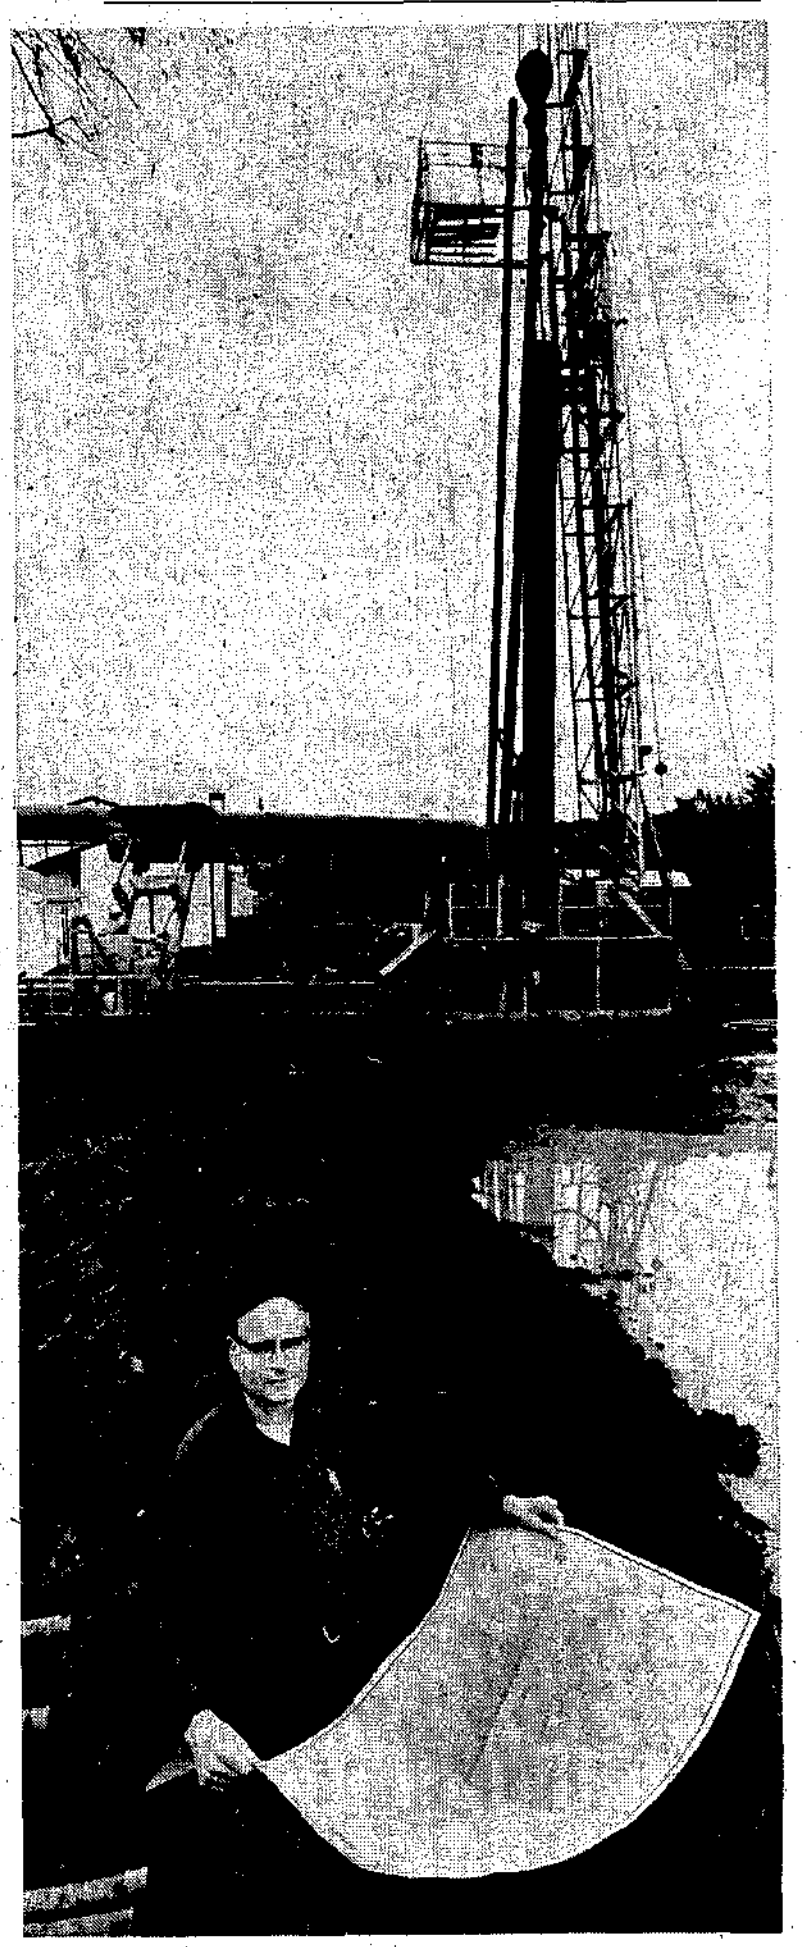

The school was founded in 1971 by Victor Dufour, head of the psychology department at Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago.

When the Dufours moved from Schaumburg to Indiana last year Nancy Leatzow of Palatine, a teacher whose son was enrolled in the school, became director of the program. Mrs. Leatzow has a master's degree in education, an Illinois State Teaching Certificate and is an instructor of child development at Harper College, Palatine.

MRS. LEATZOW SAID Centre For Life offers "a small (about 15 students) family-grouped class where children learn together in a joyous cooperative manner; an individualized approach to creative learning; and a rich, open-classroom environment."

Children have weekly swimming classes and frequent field trips, which serve as the focus for group learning activities, Mrs. Leatzow said.

A major feature of the school, however, is the opportunity for parents to become involved in what their children are learning, Mrs. Leatzow said. Parents are welcome as assistants, Mrs. Leatzow said.

just went ahead and did as they pleased."

Wolfrum was especially angry with Hennessy, whom he claimed had fought Wolfrum's request for a 25-foot wide road into the cemetery. Wolfrum said he needed the road to do his restoration work.

"Hennessy was the one all along who frantically demanded to keep it narrow or not allow it at all. He had every intention of violating the cemetery if it suited his convenience."

Hennessy acknowledged that he did not want to allow the road, but he said the damage was accidental and the city had done everything possible to avoid it.

HE SAID HE and two other public works employes went to the well site the day drilling began to show workers what to avoid. He said they were told to stay 25 feet from the fence.

Later, when he discovered the markers had been disturbed, he stopped work and called Wolfrum's office.

"It was just an oversight of the bulldozer operator, I suppose," Hennessy said.

When Wolfrum asked the city to allow him a road, Hennessy said he told him he could use the city road to the well for his work.

HENNESSY SAID he feels "very bad about the whole thing," but he said Wolfrum should have staked off the area he wanted the workers to avoid.

Overtaxed resident joins strikers camp

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said.

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said. He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year. Keeley's property has a higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said.

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said.

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

THE COMMITTEE also is calling for a freeze on Cook County assessments, a three-month extension on the Aug. 15 tax payment deadline and several other changes in tax assessment procedures.

"If more people get involved, we may be able to do something. I'm going to go right along with this group and not pay my taxes," Keeley said.

"You can't keep on taxing people — the sky can't be the limit," he said. "I'm about to retire, but I may have to work the rest of my life at these rates."

Construction set at Nike Base

Construction of a $4 million Army Reserve center will begin next spring at the former Arlington Heights Nike Base, Wilke and Central roads.

All of the dilapidated green buildings now on the site, except the concrete block house near the eastern border of the base, will be removed late this winter, Army Reserve officials said Monday.

The 80,694-square-foot building will have two levels and a brick exterior, Maj. James Morrison said.

"WE THINK it will be a building people will be proud of. We want a facility the community will accept — not an eyesore," Morrison said.

A 4,000-square-foot vehicle maintenance building also is planned, Morrison said, as well as a complete refurbishing of the block house building, which will be used mainly for storage, printing and graphic arts production.

"The block house should blend in with the new building and the community," he said.

The new center will serve as administrative headquarters for the 85th U.S. Army Reserve Command, the 12th Special Forces Group and related units. The 86th U.S. Army Reserve Command will be moved in October to Forest Park, Morrison said.

THE NEW CENTER, which will face Central Road, will have an occupancy maximum of 1,400 persons.

"But I doubt that at any one time it will have the maximum occupancy," Morrison said.

The center probably will continue to have about 50 full-time workers, he said. Most army resrve units using the Arlington Heights base are there on Thursday evenings and Saturdays.

Other plans for improving the Nike site are new parking aflccsiicitea,es site are new parking facilities, access roads and sidewalks, Morrison said.

The improvements will mark the final transition of the Arlington Heights base from a strategic Nike-Hercules missile site in the 1950s to an Army Reserve center.

On-site missiles were removed from the base in the early 1970s, when new technology made the Nike anti-aircraft weapons obsolete. The last of five radar towers was dismantled in 1975 after the site was turned over to the Army Reserve.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

Old high school now village, park site

The old Palatine High School, formally became the joint property of the Village of Palatine and the Palatine Park District Monday when the village board approved the purchase of its share of the building for a new village hall.

The purchase price of the school, which was approved by voters in a June 4 referendum, staged by the village and park district is $650,000. The village will pay $390,000 for its share of the building and the park district will pay $260,000.

The agreement calls for the 1965 portion of the building at 150 E. Wood St., to be used as a village hall. The park district will use the gymnasium, Cutting Hall auditorium and the athletic field. The park district approved the purchase of its share of the facility last month.

THE OLD HIGH school became expendable when construction began on the New Palatine High School, 1111 N. Rohlwing Rd., which will open this fall.

The purchase agreement with High School Dist. 211 marks the end of a long effort by local officials and civic leaders to acquire the building as a civic center. The school property has been considered a "once in a lifetime" acquisition by the park board because of its recreational facilities and open space.

The purchase ordinance approved Monday calls for the village and park district to share the cost of demolition of the 1929 portion of the high school. That area will be used as a parking lot.

The purchase ordinance also calls for the village to maintain all paved areas including snow removal. The park district will assume responsibility for all unpaved and landscaped areas. The cost of maintenance for mechanical equipment will be paid 55 per cent by the village, 45 per cent by the park district.

THE OTHER responsibilities to be jointly shared by the village and park district include:

- Parking facilities, including paving and lighting which will be paid 70 per cent by the village and 30 per cent by the park district.
- Renovation of mechanical systems, which will be paid 70 per cent by the village and 30 per cent by the park district.

The electric service will be placed on separate meters wherever possible. Shared utility expenses will be paid 55 per cent by the village and 45 per cent by the park district.

Mikva gets earful

U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva got an earful when he came to Des Plaines Monday to publicize the plight of residents living under flight patterns at O'Hare Airport. With jets shrieking overhead, Mikva and two Federal Aviation Administration officials got plenty of data for their noise level tests. — Page 3.

Stocks topple

The stock market fell to its lowest level in 19 months Monday, a setback sparked by rising interest rates — Sect. 3, Page 1.

Sox win, Cubs lose

Both the White Sox and Cubs were involved in ninth-inning decisions Monday night. The Sox were more fortunate, however, as Lamar Johnson's home run in the last inning provided a 5-4 victory over Seattle. In Pittsburgh, the Pirates scored twice in the ninth to beat the Cubs, 7-6.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

BOBBY LIBIT, 626 Raupp Blvd., Buffalo Grove, today is an active 9-year-old who likes to play baseball and soccer with his dog. Two years ago, Bobby was given only three months to live.

'Incurable' illness didn't dim 9-year-old's spirit

by JOHN N. FRANK

Bobby Libit likes to play baseball, dance and water ski. He's just a normal 9-year-old.

But that makes him pretty special because, two years ago, doctors said he had only three months to live.

"I was resigned to the fact that he would die and that he would die here with his family and his friends," says Patricia Libit, 626 Raupp Blvd., looking back on the days in July 1975, when she was told the youngest of her four sons had a rare viral infection, aplastic anemia.

But a doctor at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, convinced Mrs. Libit not to give up. Bobby was flown to Seattle for a bone marrow transplant, his only hope for survival.

"THEY DIDN'T GIVE any guarantees," Mrs. Libit recalls. But now, after a delicate operation on Aug. 7, 1975, and follow up treatment, which included a year of isolation to prevent infection, the doctors are giving guarantees.

"As far as I know they have never had a marrow rejection if it passed the first year," Mrs. Libit says.

Bobby is again going to school rather than taking lessons at home from a tutor. He has begun to water ski this summer and is back on the Little League baseball diamond as an outfielder.

"Last year I was almost voted for the All-Stars," he says happily. As for school, Bobby says he likes gymnastics, field days and especially music.

"I DANCE, I just make up dances to the beat. I do like modern jazz dances," Bobby says. He doesn't see dancing in his future, though.

"I think about being a cop like my bone marrow donor," his 18-year-old brother Jerry.

The only after effects for Bobby have been a dislike for hospitals and for the mask he was forced to wear to ward off infection.

"That mask, I hate it. It makes me choke. When I was wearing it the kids would say I was the bionic boy," Bobby says.

"IT ALL SEEMS like a dream now because it had a happy ending. At that time I wondered why, sure. But I have nothing but beautiful memories," Mrs. Libit says.

Those memories include the people of Buffalo Grove raising more than $10,000 for Bobby's medical expenses and the constant attention and help of the staff of the Children's Orthopedic Hospital in Seattle.

"They take care of your spirit as well as your body out there," Mrs. Libit says.

She hesitates when asked what advice she has for parents who might have to go through a similar ordeal.

"It's so hard to know what to tell other people. The only thing that really gets you through are prayers and friends and some smart doctors."

Resident won't pay taxes, his bill tripled last year

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

Homeowners form protest group

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans.

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p m at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jane Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere."

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D.C., is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes.

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills came out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else. I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills.

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said.

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council.

She said a arge-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases.

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said.

Crackdown on noisy bikers ordered

Palatine police will be instructed by the village administration to issue tickets to youths riding loud motorcycles and motorbikes on vacant lots in the village.

The village health, safety and welfare committee recommended the move Monday after the village received petitions signed by more than 200 residents of the Willow Creek Condominium area who say the noise from the vehicles is a nuisance.

Because the village has no ordinance regulating the noise level of motorcycles, the police will be asked to issue the citations under the disorderly conduct ordinance.

VILLAGE MGR. Anthony H. Harwig told the board he fears the citations may not hold up an court, however, without specific ordinances requiring muffling equipment on the motorcycles.

The village ordinance states that disorderly conduct is any conduct "tending toward a breech of the peace," including the making of "any loud noise and shouting and yelling"

Trustees Philip Stern said trying to enforce the disorderly conduct code might be a detererent to motorcyclists until the village can enact an ordinance regulating motorcycle noise.

A resident of Willow Creek condominums told the board that an open lot between Willow Creek and the Bay Brook condominiums has become a racing ground for youths on motorcycles and motorbikes. The man, who asked not to be named, said the noise usually continues from 9 a.m to midnight It involves about 10 or 11 riders under 16 years old, he said.

"People literally sought us out and said 'Where's the petition? We want to sign it,' " the man said.

HE TOLD The Herald he did not want to be named for fear of reprisals.

Harwig said the youths on loud motorcycles are a problem in other parts of the village as well.

"I've had a number of complaints from anywhere cyclists tend to exercise their skills," he said.

Cyclists must be 16 years old to ride on public streets, but there is no age regulation for riders if they are on private property.

Lost grave stones sadden official

by RUTH MUGALIAN

When the City of Rolling Meadows plowed through the Old Plum Grove Cemetery with a bulldozer two years ago, Averry Wolfrum, township cemetery trustee, was willing to consider it an unfortunate accident.

But when it happened again last week, Wolfrum was not so generous.

He called the damage "open defiance of what I was trying to do"

WOLFRUM IS trying to preserve what little is left of the pioneer cemetery, near the Meadow Edge subdivision, dating back to the 1800s. Most of the grave markers have been stolen or vandalized. What was left of them were plowed up two years ago by bulldozers digging a sewer for the Meadow Edge development on the southwest side of town.

But Wolfrum said he believed the stumps of those graves still were there until the city plowed them up last week while drilling a new well. He is storing the broken markers and had planned to restore them after the well was dug and a fence was built to keep out thieves and vandals.

The well site is just north of an old Cook County cemetery. But about two years ago Wolfrum discovered a strip of graves extending into the city limits and onto the well site. He had asked the city to avoid that strip when they drilled the well and they "agreed in principle" to do so, he said.

"We worked out a deal a couple of months ago where they wouldn't dig near the fence," Wolfrum said. (Assistant City Mgr. Charles Green assured me they would keep me informed."

BUT WOLFRUM said he discovered work on the well had begun, when he drove by the site last week and noticed the rig set up.

"My heart just fell," he said. "The bulldozer had dug a lagoon just about to the fence line where I reserved for the graves.

"I came on the scene and there was Green and (Public Works Director John) Hennessy and they looked a little surprised to see me."

Wolfrum said officials showed him three fragments of markers the bulldozeer had dug up.

"WHAT THEY did was tell me how careful they were being as they desecrated the cemetery," he said. "It's just like what happened two years ago with the sewer except that could have been a mistake. But this time I've repeatedly gone to meetings and they just went ahead and did as they pleased."

Wolfrum was especially angry with Hennessy, whom he claimed had fought Wolfrum's request for a 25-foot wide road into the cemetery. Wolfrum said he needed the road to do his restoration work.

"Hennessy was the one-all along who frantically demanded to keep it narrow or not allow it at all. He had every intention of violating the cemetery if it suited his convenience"

Hennessy acknowledged that he did not want to allow the road, but he said the damage was accidental and the city had done everything possible to avoid it

HE SAID HE and two other public works employes went to the well site the day drilling began to show workers what to avoid. He said they were told to stay 25 feet from the fence.

Later, when he discovered the markers had been disturbed, he stopped work and called Wolfrum's office.

"It was just an oversight of the bulldozer operator, I suppose," Hennessy said.

When Wolfrum asked the city to allow him a road, Hennessy said he told him he could use the city road to the well for his work.

HENNESSY SAID he feels "very bad about the whole thing," but he said Wolfrum should have staked off the area he wanted the workers to avoid.

"I've told him I'll be happy to put a man with him if he wants to stake it out or help him with anything he wants to do," Hennessy said.

Green also said the damage was a mistake and that "we called Mr. Wolfrum and all work stopped.

"If he checked with Cook County we had calls in for him as soon as we realized it. We were very concerned," he said.

200-year jail term for Columbo

DeLuca sentence the same

by DAVE IBATA

Saying "it wasn't us," Patricia Columbo and her lover, Frank DeLuca, were each sentenced to 200 to 300 years in prison for the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and brother.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca proclaimed their innocence before Cook County Circuit Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham rejected motions by their attorneys for new trials and announced the sentences.

Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, were found guilty July 1 of the May 4, 1976 killings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her 13-year-old brother, Michael.

Miss Columbo blinked back tears and spoke with a trembling voice after Pincham asked her if she had anything to say before he pronounced her sentence.

"There's one thing more important than anything else," Miss Columbo said, "that this court, your honor, the jury, can never take away from me, and that's that my father, my mother and my baby brother know it wasn't us in that house that night or that morning.

Columbo saga ends — Page 8

"They know we weren't responsible for it," Miss Columbo said, "and that's all that really matters to me."

FRANK DeLUCA spoke in a calm voice as he told Pincham, "Patricia and I are innocent . . . and I would stand on my testimony on the witness stand."

Pincham then sentenced the pair to 200 to 300 years for the killings; 20 to 50 years to Miss Columbo for solicitation to commit murder; and 10 to 50 years to DeLuca for solicitation.

The sentences will run concurrently. Miss Columbo and DeLuca will be eligible for parole after 11 years, two months in the state penitentiary.

Defense attorneys for Miss Columbo and DeLuca Monday said they will appeal their clients' guilty verdicts.

ART DeBARTOLI, 500 Woodview Ave., Elk Grove Township, and his wife Dolores, were best friends of the Columbos.

"The sentence was right," DeBartoli said. "He (Pincham) is a fair judge."

Mrs. DeBartoli agreed, saying, "No amount of years could equal the torture that was done to them (the Columbos) in snuffing out three lives."

Carolyn Tygrett, of Cary, one of Mary Columbo's sisters, said, "I take what Pincham says as what he thought was the just hing."

ALGIS BALIUNAS, Cook County assistant state's attorney who prosecuted Miss Columbo and DeLuca, said, "It is a very appropriate sentence. The fathers of the Old Testament never even contemplated such an occurence. This makes the sin of Cain look like a misdemeanor."

However, William P. Murphy, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, said the sentence was "pretty long for somebody who didn't do anything."

Murphy and Michael P. Toomin, private defense attorney for DeLuca, said they will appeal the jury's verdict that found Miss Columbo and DeLuca guilty on all counts of solicitation, conspiracy and homicide.

Mayor favors plan to get Chicago water

A plan to obtain Lake Michigan water from the City of Evanston has been rejected by Mount Prospect Mayor Carolyn H. Krause because of the cost and the distance it would involve.

Mrs. Krause will discuss her decision with officials from Arlington Heights and Palatine, who still are considering buying lake water from the North Shore community.

Mrs. Krause has recommended the Mount Prospect Village Board abandon the DAMP water commission's proposal to purchase water from Evanston in favor of the SHARE+3 plan to obtain lake water from Chicago through a reservoir and pumping station to be built at O'Hare Airport.

THE DAMP commission was created by the Illinois Legislature in 1957 and SHARE+3 was organized in 1975. Both groups were formed to obtain and distribute Northwest suburban allocations of lake water.

"I believe the time has come to choose between the two plans," Mrs. Krause said. "We cannot support both in view of our limited water funds. I personally favor SHARE for several reasons."

The mayor said the village's proximity to the airport would mean the cost of acquiring water through the O'Hare pipeline would be less than if it was purchased directly from Evanston. Mount Prospect is about eight miles from O'Hare, less than half the distance from the village to Evanston's shoreline.

The pipeline to O'Hare is estimated to cost $44 million to $62 million. The pipeline to Evanston would cost substantially more, but no estimates are available. Supporters of the Evanston line, however, say it will cost less in the long run because Evanston would sell water cheaper than Chicago.

Another reason Mrs. Krause said she supports the SHARE+3 plan is there are more municipalities with a greater combined population involved. "We could spread it (the cost) around more," she said.

DAMP CURRENTLY has three active member towns: Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine.

SHARE+3 consists of Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove, Palatine, Mount Prospect and Buffalo Grove.

In addition to the lower cost of water, Mrs. Krause said Mount Pros-

Mikva gets earful

U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva got an earful when he came to Des Plaines Monday to publicize the plight of residents living under flight patterns at O'Hare Airport. With jets shrieking overhead, Mikva and two Federal Aviation Administration officials got plenty of data for their noise level tests. — Page 3.

The stock market fell to its lowest level in 19 months Monday, a setback sparked by rising interest rates. — Sect. 3, Page 1.

Sox win, Cubs lose

Both the White Sox and Cubs were involved in ninth-inning decisions Monday night. The Sox were more fortunate, however, as Lamar Johnson's home run in the last inning provided a 5-4 victory over Seattle. In Pittsburgh, the Pirates scored twice in the ninth to beat the Cubs, 7-6.

PLO may recognize Israel

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance extended his Middle East peace mission Monday amid encouraging reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization was prepared to soften its hard-line stance against Israel.

While Vance met with King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, a State Dept. spokesman traveling with the secretary said indirect word had been received from the PLO that it might accept a modified form of United Nations Resolution 242, whic tacitly recognizes Israel's right to exist.

President Carter announced in Plains, Ga., that in light of the reports, Vance will remain in the Middle East for a "second round" of talks aimed at opening the way for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference this fall.

THE STATE DEPT. spokesman said PLO acceptance of the U.N. resolution would indicate the Palestinian group no longer demands the destruction of the Jewish state.

But the spokesman, Hodding Carter III, said the PLO must accept the resolution "in its entirety without modification."

State Dept. officials said the PLO announcement might come at a scheduled meeting of the PLO National Council in Damascus, Syria, Aug. 16.

Vance will extend his scheduled 11-day Middle East trip by one day, Carter said, remaining through Saturday for additional talks with Arab leaders.

"WE DON'T KNOW yet what's going to happen until I get a complete report from Cy Vance," Carter said. He added, "I think things look better than they did."

Vance has spent a total of 7½ hours in Taif in talks with King Khaled and his top advisers, discussing the Middle East negotiations and the part that the Saudis can play.

U.S. officials said the Saudis, strong financial backers of the PLO, have played a moderating role in the negotiations. The State Dept. described the talks as "excellent exchanges."

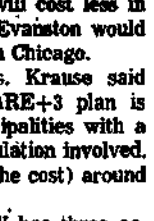

Vance was scheduled to leave Saudi Arabia today for Israel, to meet with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

There already have been signs of alarm from Israel that Vance's talks with the Arab countries have resulted in a subtle shift in the American policy favoring the Arab side.

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — The sign that matters in this picturesque tourist-trap of a town is the one that proclaims: Doubleday Field — Where Baseball Was Invented and First Played in 1839.

Few people believe the Doubleday myth any longer, but at least once each year, they are willing to suspend their doubts and pretend that here was born the infield fly, the ground-rule double and all the other accoutrements of the national pastime.

How can you help not believing? How can you rub elbows with Stan Musial, Whitey Ford and Henry Aaron and still think that baseball was a product of Hoboken, N.J., or, worse yet, England?

NO, IT IS to upstate New York, in Leatherstocking country, that the greats of the game, past and present, come to pay tribute. It is usually a somber occasion, this ceremony they call induction, when the duly-elected members of the baseball Hall of Fame — those still alive — gather to honor those who are new to the Hall, living or dead.

Leave it, then, to Ernie Banks, a child among the elderly, to turn Monday's most recent induction ceremony into an event. It was a farce, an old-fashioned, 1960s love-in, a reunion of Cub fans — some who hadn't seen each other in 30 years and others who were meeting for the first time since Sunday's doubleheader against San Diego.

Banks, the youngest of six new members and only the eighth in Hall of Fame history to be elected on his first eligible ballot, stole the show. And he didn't have to act. He was just himself — Mr. Cub.

While Al Lopez, the fatherly senor who managed the 1959 White Sox to their first pennant in 40 years, was busy being fatherly, Banks grinned and bragged about Wrigley Field.

"WRIGLEY FIELD is a sunshine park," said Ernie before the ceremony. "The World Series should be played in Wrigley Field. Do you know that Whitey Ford never got to pitch in Wrigley Field?"

Banks tugged at Ford's light-blue sleeve, pulling him over to ask him again if the unheard-of was true.

"You really never pitched at Wrigley Field?" Banks prodded Ford, who reiterated the sad fact.

"Never been inside the park," Ford added.

"Hey, there's Robin Roberts," declared Banks. "He pitched in Wrigley Field. He played for the Cubs."

Ernie found an aging Billy Herman wandering around the green and shook his hand. "Here's a guy who played 10 years for the Cubs," Banks said.

BANKS HIMSELF played 19 years, all for the Cubs and all with remarkable style and cheer. In Chicago, he was idolized for his hitting and fielding. Around the country, though, he provided another kind of heroism.

"Hey, Mr. Sunshine," they called to him. Total strangers, these fans — not Chicagoans. For in Chicago, Mr. Sunshine is unknown. He is Mr. Cub.

Banks was mobbed for autographs on his way to the induction area. He was beseiged by the press and by photographers who bore Nikons and Brownies.

He was still smiling when he reached the celebrity stand. It was the smile that said, "I have dreamed of being here, like this, and now it is reality."

AS BANKS WAS introduced by baseball Comr. Bowie Kuhn ("words almost fail here. . .they called him Mr. Cub," said Kuhn), the wind started to whip out of the southwest and the sun broke through from behind clouds that had layered this area in gloom

Indictment watched in Dist. 59 probe

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

The Cook County State's Attorney's Office will decide next month whether a grand jury indictment will be sought in a case involving four Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 officials, Asst. State's Atty. Mitchell E. Garner said Monday.

Under investigation for alleged wrongdoing related to the formation of a unit school district are board of education members Judith Zanca and Emil Bahnmaier, Supt. Roger Bardwell and public relations director Leah Cummins, Garner said.

"We are in contact with several witnesses and will conclude our investigation in a month," he said.

Garner declined to reveal the names of the witnesses or the nature of their testimony, but said he will know next month whether there is "sufficient evidence of criminal activity" to warrant pursuit of a grand jury indictment.

THE STATE'S ATTORNEY'S investigation of the four Dist. 59 officials stems from charges made in May 1976 by board member Paul Kucharski.

In a 14-page statement issued last spring, Kucharski charged that the four misinformed the board and withheld information about the process of petitioning for the formation of a unit school district.

The four "made private deals, destroyed tapes and acted inappropriately as public officials," he said.

Reiterating her earlier denials of the charges, Mrs. Zanca Monday said Kucharski's allegations "are all falsehoods and lies and have no basis in truth."

SHE SAID she spoke to "a Mr. Turner" at the state's attorney's office Monday morning who told her he knew of no investigation involving her or any other Dist. 59 officials.

"He said if there was a case someone in the school district would know about it and no one does," Mrs. Zanca said. "He told me he'd probably have something in writing for me in a few days saying there is no investigation."

Garner said he knows of no Mr. Turner, but that as the assistant state's attorney handling the Dist. 59 investigation he knows there is an investigation.

"We have over 400 attorneys here and often the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing," he said. "Mr. Turner can only speak from his own personal knowledge and he obviously isn't aware of what I'm doing."

Bahnmaier also said he knows of no investigation and denied the charges made against him by Kucharski.

BAHNAMIER AND Mrs. Zanca have repeatedly demanded a public apology from Kucharski for his charges, contending that he has no proof and there is no investigation under way.

Bardwell and Mrs. Cummins were unavailable for comment Monday.

"The fact that the state's attorney is looking into the situation is grafifying irrespective of what the outcome turns out to be," Kucharski said Monday. "It suggests I was not all wrong in bringing it to the public eye and asking that someone look into it and tell me if I'm right or wrong."

Kucharski said that from the beginning he has had serious concerns as to how the unit district movement was handled and the ethical roles played by certain individuals in getting the issue to a referendum in April.

BAHNMAIER, MRS. Zanca and Mrs. Cummins were members of the Committee of 10 Dist. 59 residents who filed the petition seeking formation of an Elk Grove Township unit school district.

Kucharski charged that the three district officials and Bardwell made a deal with representatives of Centex Industrial Park that involved promising a lower tax rate for the new district in exchamge for the business community's support of the unit district referendum.

Defeated by better than a 2-to-1 margin in a referendum last April, the unit district would have combined 21 Dist. 59 elementary and junior high schools, Elk Grove High School in Elk Grove Village and Forest View High School in Arlington Heights under one administration.

Residents await creek improvements here

by DEBBE JONAK

McDonald Creek lies low and quiet in Prospect Heights. But that does not comfort residents living along the banks of the moody stream.

Spared in the last few years by sparse rainfall, they stand ready for the floodwaters to return at any time — ready in virtual fortresses tightly sealed and armed with sump pumps.

Improvements have been made to McDonald Creek to prevent flooding problems. But they believe more should be made. They feel most of the improvements — culverts, widening of the creek bed — have improved conditions for Mount Prospect residents downstream.

The residents support a plan that calls for constructing a creek bypass northwest of the city in which floodwater would flow during heavy rains.

BUT THE PROJECT is still in the planning stage, and until it is finished, residents can only wait and plug the cracks in their homes.

A few neighbors recently sat in the kitchen of Angelo and Joan Paul, 1007 Wildwood Dr., recalling the "Great Flood of 1972" and recounting progress in solving the problem since then.

On Aug. 22, 1972, there was water in the kitchen, water slowly creeping up the first step of the staircase to the second floor.

It was the worst of eight floods in a monsoon-like summer.

She and her husband and family had moved into the house just a couple of weeks earlier. Many of their belongings — including irreplaceable wedding photos and baby pictures — were still in boxes in the basement.

THE FLOOD SAVED them the bother of unpacking."

Mrs. Paul sat on the third step with her children watching the water approach and singing.

"So my daughters wouldn't get hysterical, I sang, 'Water stay away from my door.' But I'm thinking to my self, "God, how close are you going to let it get?' " she said.

After the floodwaters receded — about six hours later — it was time for reckoning.

"We had to talk it over and decide, Are we gonna stay or are we gonna leave?" she said.

THEY DECIDED TO stick it out and fight, beginning the long and costly process of waterproofing their house.

So did Harold and Gloria Kargenian.

When they moved into their home at 1012 W. Wildwood Dr., they had not heard about the flooding problem. But Kargenian suspected something when he found mud on the ceiling rafters in the basement.

His suspicions soon were verified with a water-filled basement and the Kargenians have spent the last seven years flood-proofing their house, too.

"HERE YOU GET A new house and anticipate decorating, but you spend your first few years getting pumps and caulking," Mrs.Kargenian said.

In 1972, they spent $12,787 repairing damage from the flood—$9,197 of that happened during the Aug. 22 overflow.

They and the Pauls have spent thousands of dollars each on preventive measures. Kargenian, chairman of the city's plan commission and the North Cook County Soil Conservation District, has installed seven sump pumps and one standby system. The main pumps can handle 24,000 gallons of water an hour. A gas generator will keep the pumps running if electricity fails.

Since the last flood in 1973, plans and programs have been initiated to alleviate the problem, which is caused by the narrowness of the creek, poorly designed bridges which act as dams and debris in the stream.

Among the areas hit hardest by flooding was the Wildwood Drive neighborhood to the north, along Patricia Lane and on Edwards Street to the south.

THE SOO-LINE culvert, which runs under the railroad tracks near Wolf and Kensington roads, was enlarged in 1975 to help speed the flow of water during heavy rains.

McDonald Creek winds through Mount Prospect and empties into the Des Plaines. River. Although the new culvert was called a godsend by some, many contend it will substantially improve the flooding situation only for those downstream in Mount Prospect.

So residents upstream are setting their sights on the Des Plaines Floodwater Management Plan.

The plan is a joint project of the Metropolitan Sanitary District, U.S. Soil Conservation Service and the Illinois Division of Water Resources.

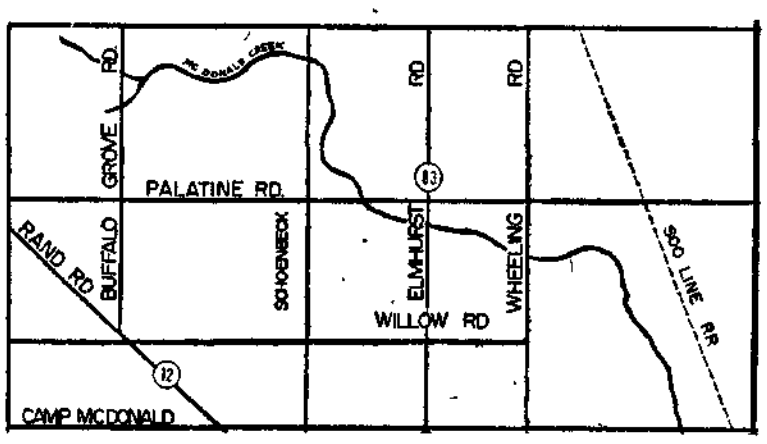

IT CALLS FOR a by-pass northwest of Prospect Heights to contain floodwater during heavy rains. Stonegage Drive would dead-end just west of Wildwood Drive because a bridge there would be removed to allow freer flow of the water. The creek would be widened in key spots.

"It would solve the flood problem," Roger Olson, project director, said. However, he added it will take at least three to five years to complete paperwork, planning and secure approval from Washington.

Until then, Prospect Heights can only hope for a few more dry seasons, he said, offering little hope himself — "It'll rain again, don't worry."

So neighbors of the creek are arming themselves for the next battle and trying to lessen the problem by keeping the creek clean. They pull weeds, trees, chairs and other debris out of the stream on a regular basis.

"We're going to lick it together," Paul said. "You know, we're one big family here because of the flooding — you'll find no better friends."

FLOODING ALONG McDonald Creek n Prospect Heights has forced some residents to protect their homes against high water. They want creek improvements that will keep their homes high and dry.

6 earn Eagle Scout Award

Six members of Boy Scout Troop 117 have received the organization's highest recognition, the Eagle Scout Award, for performing community service projects.

David Heinz organized car washes and recruited other troop members to help. Proceeds went to the Mount Prospect Senior Center. John Heinz and his fellow Scouts and their parents collected used toys and games for Little City near Palatine. Mike Porto reevaluated the troop's counselor list and directed several Scouts working on the project. Paul Zimmerman and a group he supervised updated the counselor list. Bill Reinert collected used books and presented them to various schools and organizations. Kirk Verhasselt took charge of assisting at the Mount Prospect Historical Society as the other Eagle Scouts participated.

John Heinz, of 1204 Robert Dr., was scoutmaster while the boys were working toward their Eagle awards. The new scoutmaster is Richard Porto, of 1113 Birch Dr. Troop 117 is sponsored by Trinity United Methodist Church, 605 W. Golf Rd.

MOUNT PROSPECT police records show 94 incidents of vandalism in the village during July with $10,565 damage. Totals for the first seven months of the year are 684 incidents, $70,346 damage.

Comparing the current statistics with last year, there were 786 incidents through July 1976, amounting to $61,161 damage.

NORTHWEST COVENANT Church, 300 N. Elmhurst Rd., is fighting late summer boredom with an adventure club for kids. This is the fourth year the church has sponsored a series of four weekly summer outings for youngsters ages 5 to 14.

The first trip last week took a busload of young people to the Goodman Theatre in Chicago for the play "Clown Town." The group carried sack lunches and ate in Grant Park. This week the kids went to the Shedd Aquarium to view many varieties of water life and saw sharks being fed. In addition, they took a cruise on Lake Michigan.

Resident won't pay taxes, his bill tripled last year

by DEBBE JONAK

John Keeley said he is not going to pay his property taxes.

He sat in his 100-year-old house on the corner of Dundee and Wolf roads in Wheeling with an expression on his face somewhere beteen angry and insulted.

"We can hold out until the first of the year. After that they (the county) can sell your house," the self-employed printer said.

Not only did Keeley's tax bill almost triple this year, but he also discovered he has been overtaxed for the past 19 years.

HE IS ONE OF a group of Northwest and North suburban residents who are joining a taxpayers' strike, organized by the newly formed Taxpayers Protest Committee.

Keeley received a tax bill of $3,800 on his 1.25 acre tract. Last year, before the quadrennial reassessment, he paid the county $1,300.

"So I went down to the county office — I wanted to find out how they were taxing me," he said. There he discovered the county has taxed him for 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road bordering his property since he moved there in 1958.

While Keeley technically owns that portion of Wolf Road, it was declared a public easement in 1936 and is nontaxable.

"They've been charging me for . . . 9,500 square feet of Wolf Road for 19 years," Keeley said, adding the overcharge comes to $600 for this year alone.

"They told me everyone who lives from Dundee to Hintz Road possibly is paying extra on the road," he said

FRANK COAKLEY, a spokesman for the county assessor's office, admitted it appears Keeley has been overcharged. He could not say whether any other Wolf Road residents were over taxed. Several residents questioned were not aware of any inequity.

Keeley's tax bill will be corrected for 1976 when he files a complaint, Coakley said. He cannot, however, be reimbursed for any previous years because complaint deadlines have expired.

Even with the $600 deduction, Keeley is not satisfied. He said a revised $3,200 bill is still too high for a residential lot.

The county began assessing property on the basis of fair market value last year, Keeley's property has a higher market value than most residential lots because it is zoned for multi-family housing.

"THEY SHOULD come up with a better way of assessing property — not based on its value in the future, but what it's worth now," Keeley said.

"I don't feel I should have to pay taxes on something that may or may not develop on my property," he said.

While the county is taxing Keeley as if he could sell the property for more than $150,000, Keeley has not had an offer since he put it up for sale five years ago, he said. Nobody will pay $150,000 for the land, he said.

So Keeley is supporting the protest committee's push for an end to the practice of assessing property by its market value.

Homeowners form protest group

by PAUL GORES

High taxes, perhaps like no other issue, have a way of bringing out the rebel in Americans.

It happened 201 years ago when Americans went to war to protest what they believed were unjust taxes.

Today it is happening in northern Cook County, where taxpayers are hoping to organize a "taxpayers' revolt" to protest huge increases in their tax bills. Some increases have been as high as 50 per cent in the Northwest suburbs.

The move for a tax strike began with a small group of irate taxpayers in Evanston about two weeks ago. The group met last week and drew about 150 members. Thursday the "revolt" will come to Palatine, where disgruntled taxpayers are expected to gather at 8 p.m. at the public library, 500 N. Benton St.

The movement probably will pick up steam and a larger following today and Wednesday with similar meetings in Winnetka and Glenview.

"I've called everybody I can think of," said Mrs. William Spring, 801 S. Vail Ave., Arlington Heights, who has taken a strong interest in the proposed strike. "Something has to be done, but we can't do it alone," she said.

"The John Doe and Jané Doe are frustrated. They can write all the letters they want to the 'Fencepost,' or call the village hall everyday, but you won't get anywhere."

Mrs. Spring said she believes a large group of protesters will have some "clout" with local taxing bodies and the state legislature.

That is what James L. Tobin, president of the National Taxpayers United of Illinois, also is hoping. The state taxpayers group, an affiliate of the National Taxpayers' Union in Washington, D.C., is heading the strike drive. It has scheduled the regional meetings in an attempt to gather enough protesters to make its mark with those responsible for increases in taxes.

THE GROUP IS collecting money for local newspaper ads and is circulating leaflets to help organize the citizen meetings.

Palatine Township Assessor Bernard E. Pedersen said since the tax bills ca e out in mid-July, complaints have revolved mainly around two points.

There are a lot of questions about the taxing bodies spending too much and there are questions about the assessments themselves," Pedersen said.

The tax assessments are based on the market value of property, which increased in most cases this year because the Cook County assessor's office completed its quadrennial reassessments of property in much of the Northwest suburban area.

Pedersen said a taxpayers' strike might do something to alleviate future tax increases.

"I SEE NO reason why they shouldn't do it," Pedersen said. "People complain and picket about everything else. I think complaints or a revolt could have reverberations in a lot of areas."

Pedersen said a large-scale protest might cause taxing bodies to reconsider increased spending, increase Homestead tax exemptions for the elderly or lead to some regulating legislation at the state level.

Wheeling Township Assessor Marshall Theroux was not as optimistic that a protest would have much effect.

He said there is nothing that can be done about this year's tax bills.

"Unless they can find an illegality or error in their assessment, I know of nothing that would happen from expressing displeasure," Theroux said.

Property owners who do not pay their tax bills by Aug. 15 are subject to a monthly fine of 1 per cent of the amount due.

THE PROSPECT OF an even higher tax bill may be a deterrent to some who would like to join the strike.

Unless the numbers exceed several hundred in each community, they would be considered only "symbolic" protests according to Suzanne Reade of the Illinois Public Action Council.

She said a arge-scale strike, however, would leave taxing bodies with "a great deal of problems with cash flow."

Ms. Reade's group is trying to explain to taxpayers ways they can work to prevent future tax increases.

"Over the long run the only solution is through legislation," she said.

Mayor favors SHARE plan

pect's expenes for engineering and feasibility studies are less with SHARE than with DAMP, also because there are more participants in SHARE.

The village board is expected to pass a resolution Aug. 16 which supports the SHARE plan and allocates $10,000 for legal, engineering and related costs for one year.

The SHARE+3 towns will meet Aug. 17 to discuss legal counsel for the organization and to establish a one-year budget and financial plan.

Owners held on explosive counts

Co-owners of a construction company that has worked on the Metropolitan Sanitary District's deep tunnel project were arrested Monday and charged with illegal possession and storage of explosives without a license.

Arrested were Anthony C. DeVito, 47, of 2018 Birch Ln., Park Ridge, and his brother Eugene, 53, of 1320 N. Hamlin Ave., Park Ridge, co-owners of Reliance Underground Construction Co.

The DeVitos were arrested a week after they called Cook County sheriff's police to dispose of several unstable explosives from their warehouse at 2500 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township. However, after checking records in the Illinois Dept. of Mines and Minerals, police learned later in the week the DeVitos did not have an explosives license.

COOK COUNTY Sheriff's detectives seized 29 sticks of dynamite and 93 electric blasting caps, and destroyed an additional 26 sticks of dynamite, investigators said.

"We've had this stuff (the explosives) for seven years and never thought anything about it," said Eugene DeVito after he and his brother were released Monday on $5,000 bond each. "We did what we thought was right when we called the police. We were unaware of a license."

Reliance Underground Construction Co. was awarded a contract to install more than 10,000 feet of sewer pipes in the Metropolitan Sanitary District's Deep Tunnel Project in Mount Prospect.

The project has required blasting but spokesmen for the James McHugh Construction Co., Chicago said Reliance has not supplied any of the dynamite used in the project and has done no blasting. McHugh is one of two general contractors hired by MSD for work on several drop shafts in the project.

"We haven't subcontracted any company for blasting purposes," said James LaRocque, a spokesman for McHugh. "We have supplied our own dynamite for the project — Reliance was only in charge of installing sewer lines."

The DeVitos are scheduled to appear at 1:30 p.m., Aug. 29 in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court.
